Jeshua Speaks about: THE VALUE OF LOVE

Beloved one, now we will speak of love, the value of love.

Why would you seek love? Because truly, from the time you take form, you are looking for love. You want to know, “Where can I find it? How can I keep it? I want to be loved, and I want to give love.”

You know the feeling which happens when you are in love, when you are in the space of love with a project that you are working on, with a poem, with another person, with a beloved pet. You are allowing the boundaries of what you have said is yourself to be relaxed for a moment or so or even longer, and you are allowing yourself to expand into the vibration which is your true divine nature, the nature of love.

Now, cast your mind back to a time when you fell in love with someone, when there was nothing else in the world except that one person and you felt that you were in the flow with that one, either human or four-footed. You are in love with that one, and the heart opens. You feel yourself to be more than just the personage of one individual. You feel yourself to be expansive and to be in the place which does not know boundaries, at least for a moment or so and perhaps longer, because that feeling is what you are searching for.

You know the feeling of Home. You know the feeling from whence you have come, supposedly. Now, you have never left Home. It is you, the divine You, and you are in it all of the time, but there are times when your attention is brought to something that seems to be outside of you.

When you feel that you have fallen in love with someone, what you have done is to take down the boundary of what you have said, “Well, this is myself, and this is you, and I am in love with you.” At the same time, always and forever, you are One with that one—always and forever. In truth—now hear this well—you are making what you see the other one to be.

So if you would know love in your life, live in love. Say, “Whatever my eyes see, whatever my heart opens to, I am in love with that,” because you are. That is where you live. That is where you exist, is in love. All of the rest of it is just extraneous. Love is your true nature. Even when you see what is termed a stranger, they are not a stranger to you. They are a being that you know very well; otherwise, they would not be within your reality.

THIRTIETH ANNIVERSARY

This year marks the 30th anniversary of the founding of Oakbridge University. In the spring of 1989 eight forward-thinking individuals saw the need and opportunity for establishing an academic branch of the Unity Church of Christianity in Federal Way, Washington, and in May of 1989 Oakbridge University was incorporated as an independent entity, meeting at the church.

The University was designed to be, as its name suggests, a bridge between people, ages, and philosophies. The oak, growing from a small acorn seed, signifies the potential for on-going growth. It also signifies strength and shelter from the storms of life beneath its spreading branches.

In its first quarter of academic offerings, Fall Quarter 1989, the University offered 12 on-going classes, 12 independent workshops, 1 correspondence course, and one 30-hour seminar.

At this year’s Summer Advance (which used to be called a Retreat until Jeshua asked why we called it that, and suggested that we were Advancing rather than retreating) in July we will have a celebration to mark this wonderful anniversary. You are invited, along with special speakers of renown from the University’s history, to

You know them from before time began, because time is a construct.

News flash: There are realities that do not know time. They are not under the pressure of “have to”—have to be at a certain place at a certain time and, “My goodness, I’d better hurry up to get there.” There are realities that just are—no measure of time, no judgment of time, just existence (hopefully) in love. It is what you are making for yourself. Does it have value? Oh, yes. And the more you connect with it, the more value you feel, being in love.

You are coming into the realization now that everything that surrounds you is heavenly, is of the angelic realm. The angels, they are you. They come, they work with you, and the more you invite them to be within your consciousness, within your awareness, the more you will feel them. It cannot be otherwise. Always they travel with you everywhere you go. Always, love travels with you and wants to be turned on at any time. All you have to do is to say, “I am in love.”

Nothing truly can penetrate the love that you surround yourself with. Now, yes, there are times when you walk outside of that love for a moment or so. But the clue to knowing the love that you are is the smile. Every time you smile, you open the door to recognizing love; recognizing the love that you are and that other ones are.

Many of the brothers and sisters are looking for love. Many of the brothers and sisters feel that if they can find someone who will love them, it will make them complete. They are already complete, but as you smile at them, as you are happy being with them...now, I know there are ones who make it a little more difficult because of their attitude, but as you will keep being in love yourself, it is contagious.

The answer to all of the ones who are looking for love is to begin giving it. That is the secret. You will probably want to tell them that Truth at some point if they ask, and they are always asking. There are ones who want to find love. Suggest to them that they love whoever stands in front of them, even ones who are giving them the “hard time”. Love that one, because if you can love that one who seemingly is giving a hard time, you can love anyone. At least that is how humans understand it.

If there is someone who seems to be really rubbing you the wrong way, try smiling at them. Be in good spirit when you are speaking with them. Really, if you have to, look for their good points, but you do not even have to do that much. Just press the inner button that says, "Love coming forth; watch out." You have that button with you all the time, and anytime.

Be happy. You have known that slogan, and it is the secret. It costs nothing except the decision to practice doing it. I know that at first it seems, "Well, I'm just kind of play-acting." Go for it. Play-act. See if it feels good.

The human mind has been taught to analyze, to take everything apart and wonder what is going on. "How can I make it better?" The human mind is a bit of a trap. The human heart—now, I am not talking about the physical, but I am talking about the heart of love which resides within you. All you have to do is turn it on. Allow it to be expressed, and you will see miracles.

Already you are seeing that, because when ones come up to you and they are so upset about something, you are very kind to them. You smile as much as you can and you take care of whatever they think the problem is, and you acknowledge them. That is truly what they are looking for. They want to be acknowledged, but they think there has to be a reason that they have to come up to you and you will make it right for them.

All you have to do with anyone is to smile at them and to love them, because that is what they are looking for. That is what they feel they are missing.

What is the value of love? It is without price. It is value of itself. Is it healing? Yes, it is healing. It is healing to the situation. It is healing to the body. You have ones who...you have an example, a story, a very true story of one who is well known who was suffering from what they call terminal illness. He went to a hotel, stayed there and watched funny movies all day long; found himself laughing; found himself feeling happy; found himself not worrying about his "condition". What happened? He got well. He left the hotel. He went out and lived a long life after that, a happy life, because he lived in love. He lived in a place of knowing his value, and the value was love.

Now, you come into the world with certain pre-conceived ideas. You bring with you a certain remembrance of vibration, even as the small one, and you see this if you are a parent of several small ones in the family. There will be one who comes in to human expression and is crying and just will not stop for six months. Another one in the same family comes in and is quiet, is looking around, "Where is this place? What is new here?" and is smiling, because there is so much to discover. Same family, same biological genes, and yet a different way of looking at this new life to be explored and understood.

Those of you who are of large families, those of you who have had many in the family, you have seen quite a variety. And as they grow, they develop their own characteristics, which brings me to a very good point. You may have the small one who is feeling from the very beginning that everything is wrong and the body hurts and it is feeling, "I'm hungry; I want this; it doesn't feel comfortable." They do not say it in words, but they let you know. They are upset about everything. They are probably going to keep that pattern for a while until they get tired of it.

Some will take more persuasion than others. But as you are standing in love, loving them no matter what they do, no matter how they appear, there is a vibration. Now, you have heard it said, and it is very true, that all is energy in this human realm, in this display of life. It is energy. So as you are standing in the place of love energy, it can be felt; it can be measured. You can certainly feel it; you are feeling, "I'm more expansive. I just feel really good today. I love you."

If you would know love in your life, be it. Yes, give it. It is contagious. You have found this to be true. I have observed ones going through life with the head down. "Nobody loves me. Nobody loved me from the beginning. I don't know why I'm here."

Well, you are here to give love. You are here to give humor, to lighten up, to be for other ones the Light that they do not quite see for themselves. You are here to make jokes, to take life lightly, and you do not even have to be the comedian. You just have to enjoy life and enjoy who is in it with you.

So, what is the value of love? In truth, you cannot put a price on it. The value of love has many gifts in it—the gift of healing of the body, of the emotions, even of the soul, the soul which has been troubled. It has the gift of coming Home; not having to struggle and strive, to read all the right books and go to all the right classes; the gift of having arrived, the gift of finding the pearl which is without price, and yet it is all and everything that you have been searching for.

So be it.

celebrate with us. And you are invited to be with us for the full week of the Advance, July 14th – 19th.

The theme of this year's Advance is Spiritual Ancestry. Who were your ancestors, ancient and modern, and where did your spiritual beliefs come from? Where did your ancestors, ancient and modern, come from? Are you the ancestor of a future self? Is time linear? What is time? Does time bend? We will play with questions such as these and see where they take us. Plus deepening meditations, music and fellowship. Evenings with Jeshua, Mother Mary, and maybe Joseph and Mary Magdalene.

See you in Sequim in July!

JESHUA Q&A

UNCONDITIONAL LOVE VS. CONTROLLING LOVE

I'm so grateful to be here (Yes, I am grateful you are here) I wanted to ask you, being that you were talking about love and loving, challenging people, would you please explain a little bit of how to navigate love situations if you are loving someone but putting up a boundary, and because of that boundary of loving yourself and putting a boundary, it makes that person become over into like a hatred level of love or malicious, grasping...I know is not love, but I think it's more of worldly love or what maybe the human sees of love, but it's not the unconditional, want-the-best-for-you real soothing, healing love. So I'm someone who is developing boundaries, and I've been having to bare my teeth and become aggressive to kind of keep a boundary. So when I asked you before about this situation, you had said that this person has been a babe in my arms, and we've had many lifetimes together, which I really feel to be true because of the deep level of feeling the commitment and care that I feel. But because of the toxicity, knowing one needs to move forward, I'm just wondering how to, because it's been the same cycle for a very long time, so I'm just wanting your advice about when someone whom you are giving love to is reacting with malicious hatred back at you.

It is difficult, yes, to be in love with someone and to recognize that they are searching for love as well, but in all the wrong ways, in ways that they feel their power as opposed to losing themselves in true love. You are doing a very good job of standing your ground and loving and teaching this other one that what they are trying to give you is not love; that what they are trying to do is grasping at power and wanting to have things their own way because of a feeling of insecurity on their part. They feel that if they can make decisions and be powerful in that way, then they can love in that way, but that is not love, as you have seen.

Do what you are doing. Stay firm. Love, but do not be what they call the doormat. Do not let them feel that they have the power over you, because in truth, no one does have power over you. It is always your decision. You have seen what feels loving to you and where you want to abide. Stand firm in that. Keep loving them and wishing the best for them. Speak always in a very loving way, a soothing way. You do not need to get into conflict—it doesn't feel good—and just speak in a soothing way with them. They are either going to wake up and realize that what they are trying to get is not truly how to get it, or they may need several other lifetimes before they come to the realization that, "That which I seek is not power. That which I seek is love, and how to find love is to give it."

But it may take another few lifetimes, because this one has held up in front of them the picture, the image that when you are all powerful, you can have everything. And he is finding that, no, it does not work that way. Know that truly you are always loved, because you are. Know truly that you are love, because you are. Sometimes you have to do what is called the tough love. Hang tough (Thank you).

Thank you, because you are doing the work.

You are teaching this one, albeit there's a bit of the not wanting, the other one doesn't want to accept it, but you have—as we have spoken other times—you have been the mother, and you have guided this one. And again, he comes to you because he knows that you know the secret. But in truth, stand your ground. You are lovable. You are love itself. It does not have to be possessed.

ELEPHANT IN THE ROOM

Thank you for that joyful message about love. It seems so self-evident, and yet it's so complex to carry out.

It gets a bit elusive from time to time.

Yes, especially the ones who are challenging to love, like our political situation. I've gotta ask. It's the elephant in the room. Everybody wants to know. It's big, yes, the government shutdown standoff and the repercussions, and what do we do about it? How can we help? I know we can keep sending love. What I do is imagine him as a little boy who needed love (This is true) and he didn't get it. And now he's digging in his heels and taking his ball and is not going to play with anybody. But could you give us a little insight about what is transpiring with all of that?

And yet there are ones of the brothers and sisters who agree with him and want him to be the powerful father figure. Now, he does not know how to be a father figure. He does not know how to love. He only knows how to demand. He has often played this role in other lifetimes, where he has been the king, where his word was all and nobody else's word counted for anything. He is trying to play that role again, but it is not going to have the desired outcome for him.

He is, as we have said many times in the last two years, very much the one who has come to stir the pot and to allow everyone to have opportunity to see where they abide, whether the heartstrings go out to the ones who seem to be suffering—and mark well, I have said “seem” to be suffering; they are playing their part as well. They will come through it. Even if they release the body, they still are playing their part, and they will come through it with a feeling of having done their part.

This is all leading to a grand awakening, an awakening that truly one would say, “Well, I would have liked it to be more soft, to be easier, to be more loving,” but as you have seen, that was not and has not been the way that was chosen. There has been upon this plane a desire for drama. It does get the juices of the body running, and it brings forth in clarity where ones abide, whether they are in fear or if they are in love and trusting and knowing that truly everything does serve the awakening. And it does. It is being played out in spades right now, as you can see.

He is setting into motion that which is going to bring about a grand awakening—for him, and for all of the ones who play with him, and I use that word advisedly: play. And that includes ones who are, as you would say, merely observing, and yet having the heartstrings stirred. It is very good that you have opportunity to abide in divine order, in knowing that truly this, too, shall pass.

This, too, will bear much good fruit. There has been a desire of the brothers and sisters and you to have a clarity about who I am, and I don't mean me, one Yeshu'a, but I mean each one wanting to know, “Am I the divine holy Child?” and wanting to know, “What is being created?” and watching it to see how it plays out—emphasis on “play”; I know it is difficult.

You have the empathetic heart that reaches out and says, “There but for other circumstances go I,” and it hurts the heart, because you want to make things better. It is the loving parent in you that wants to reach out to the children and make it better, and yet you have to believe in the power of the Child, even this one who seems to be a bit abused early on as he saw life to be. So, as they say, you put on your big girl pants and say, “I'm going to wade through this. I'm going to see it through, and I know that there is good in this,” and there is.

But in the meantime, if we stand together and walk together and say, “This is not okay,” that is what we need to do.

Yes, that is your voice and that is your power. And not to just stand mutely by and say, “Well, I know this is all going to work out, and my Father up in heaven is going to take care of it.” No, you are the ones who are living this drama. You are the one who is experiencing what is going on, so you will be acting, you will be speaking, you will be writing your letters, you will be petitioning, etc., every way, marching if that is your way, to make your point visible.

The women's march is a week from today (Okay, very good) and we ask our brothers to come with us.

Yes. And as you have seen, there is a great uprising; ones are saying that this is not who we are. There is a quote, "We are better than this," and it is true. This one who thinks that the only way to go is with grasping power is going to come to a great awakening for himself, that no, love is the stronger power. But it still has a ways to go.

Well, in the book that we are studying, you have said that we are starseeds (Yes) and that this is a grand experiment with starseeds from many different star systems coming here (Right), so that has helped me to understand that maybe some of the starseeds who are so diametrically opposed to my values may be here as part of this drama because of that fact that they are diametrically opposed, because otherwise I find it very difficult to feel compassion for them when it seems like they're not feeling compassion for anybody else, even though...

This is true, yes. Not all of the brothers and sisters who walk our holy Mother, the Earth, have the same background and understanding. Some of them are relatively young in consciousness and relatively still learning that, "If I do such and such, this is the result," and finding that not all of the results are exactly what they want. Some of them are younger, yes, and they are learning.

So they are the ones who want to have someone to tell them what to do and someone who is really powerful, and they don't see how they are giving away their power by doing that?

This is true. It is what they have always known—the commander of the starship, the ones who were in charge of life as it was experienced in their previous incarnations. Yes, they have been the ones who have made decisions, and it was only left up to them to choose to either do it or to not exist. But now they are finding that ones can choose, and this is a new thought for some.

So where is our soul family? What system of stars are we from, that we've had this kind of advanced training or advanced lifetime where we've moved along on the scale of love?

Not all star formations—galaxies and star formations—are of the same age. Some are newer than others, so they are populated by those who are younger, less knowledgeable or experienced than some who have been of older star formations, galaxies, constellations, whatever. So some of the newer ones are still testing out their wings. They are still seeing, "If I want something, I go after it and I get it," as opposed to, "I understand I am creating." So you have patience.

I've totally had lots of patience. Okay.

It is good that you recognize all of this, because it is part of the human drama. And it is good that you come to a place of acknowledging the wealth, the treasure in all of the different experiences and reactions to experiences, and then to come right back Home and to recognize, "I am creating that which I see. I am judging that which I see," and to be at peace with that. It is working its way through.

Okay, divine order strikes again.

Again, yes. Keep speaking, keep loving, keep marching.

HAVE YOU LOST YOUR KEYS?

How do I get something to come back from inner space that has disappeared from my experiential reality in this dimension?

Well, you pray. And by that, I mean you think very strongly and invite it to be within your reality again, if it be helpful to the next understanding of Who and What you are. So you pray, keeping it open-ended, knowing that truly nothing is lost in spirit; it can be found if it truly is necessary (Thank you) But nothing is ever lost. You created it in the first place; you can create it once again.

VIOLET FLAME

How important is the violet flame of St Germain?

It is very important as ones will give it importance. It could just as well be the little green shoot. The violet flame is something that is symbolic. It has no real power except as you give power to it. But it is good. There's really no magic in violet, you know. Try for yourself the sunset—reds and oranges of sunset—and see how that feels for power. Then see where the power originates, because it originates with you; in other words, you give it power. So it might as well be the sunset flame.

Happy Valentines Day
