

The Christ of You - Part 2

2023-06-03

(Part 1 first appeared in an Evening With Jeshua at the San Diego Advance on February 20, 1999)

Beloved one, always I am with you. Anytime you call me, and I am right there at your service. I am right there to bring to you the next tidbit, or big piece, of reality with a capital "R". And sometimes you are ready for it, sometimes you are walking into it. And sometimes you are saying "I want more". And it comes to you, as you will be open to it. This is a time that you have programmed already in what you would see to be previous lifetimes. You have set up certain parameters of what you have and would expect and understand that reality, lowercase "r", and capital "R", to know "Who am I?"

Have you ever asked that? "Who, am I? Why am I? What am I supposed to be doing here? I know certain things," you say, "certain parameters, but I'm not sure of the Allness. I think if I knew the Allness, I might be overwhelmed." Well, in truth, you will never be given more than you can handle. But you will be given more so that you can handle it. So go ahead and ask. It is okay to ask. Go ahead and accept that which comes to you and ask of yourself (I have seen you're doing this) "What is this message for? What does this really, truly mean? What am I supposed to do with this information?" And then you have said, "I think I'll just play with it."

And that is the best approach. Allow yourself to be on vacation. Physically, yes, as you are coming into a time of travel, perhaps or vacation, but also to take vacation from "This is how it has to be."

In truth, there is nothing and no one who can tell you that it must be a certain way. You are the conductor of your own orchestra, and you are orchestrating a wonderful life. That is why you have been drawn in the past, some of you, to the portrayal of a program known as "It's A Wonderful Life." And yes, you did, as they say, you did groove with it, you did enjoy it, you did say "That feels good!" And yes, you deserve to feel good.

You are orchestrating putting together this lifetime to complete that which has felt to be incomplete. And yet, in other ones, you have already completed all. So you're doing a re-build. Which is to say to you, those of you who, and there are ones in this grouping, who tend to take life seriously. While you can set it aside and say, "Hey, you know that orchestrating all of this, this is my reality. And if I don't like what seems to be reality, I can re-program and re-judge. In other words, it's only the judgment that is saying that it must be validated a certain way. Maybe you can stand back from it and say, "How would this look if I were someone else? Oh, really? And he would see me as a wise person who knew what she/he was doing? Ah! I've got them fooled"

Have you ever felt that way? Of course, you have. Even when you are a small one, , connected to the Divine being that you are, and you have said "I'm going to play for a while. I'm going to suggest to them that they don't really know me, and I know more than they do." So the little ones, they will come up to you and they will speak words of wisdom. They will speak to you things that perhaps you have been thinking about, or you used to think about, or you might think about, and they give you that impetus to look further: To look more and to see more, and to be quite happy with what you are putting together.

Now I know that a separated ego will judge. That is its function, to judge and say, "Well, you didn't quite do that program just quite right. You didn't say what you had planned to say. You didn't really follow through on it."

That is separated ego. You, as the I Am Presence that you are, are always perfect. That which you are led to say, to think, has a reason, a purpose behind it. And do not throw it out as rubbish before you have actually looked at it and made peace with it. Because every message that comes to you, even if you don't want to hear it, "and no, no, no, I'm not listening." It will keep knocking on your door until finally you open the door a crack and you say, "Well, is there a benefit in there?" And always, there is: A benefit that comes to you as a gifting.

I say this to my beloved friend and teacher, the one you know as Judith, "If you will just be quiet for a moment. Breathe. Take in the breath of life and relax." Because sometimes, not recently too much, the mind will run away. The mind wants to know. The mind wants to figure everything out. And sometimes the pieces of life do not fit together quite in form as you would have them fit together. And you will say, "Well, what's wrong with my manifesting aspect? I thought I could manifest X, Y & Z." Give it time. Give it patience. It is coming together.

For you have, before you took embodiment, set for yourself a pathway. And you have set it so that you can enjoy it -- be in joy with it. And to stand back from it sometimes and say, "Wow! I programmed all that drama?" or "I programmed all of that laughter? I programmed certain things coming together? That's drama for me. And for others. What's the benefit in it?" And as you ask, as you become quiet, it will come to you, - sometimes in more power than you expected! And sometimes you say, "Ahh, wait a minute, give this to me in small pieces." I have heard by my beloved friend and teacher, the one you know as Judith, say, "Wait a second. I don't need the whole overflow with everything." And that is okay. One piece at a time, one breath at a time.

You have, hear me well, programmed, a lifetime - this lifetime - to be of joy; to be of happiness; to be of discovery; to go different places; to interact with different ones; to say things that you wonder, "Where did that come from? You know, I was really more wise than I thought I could be."

As you sit with what has been transpiring and you look at the gifting, in the gifts that that appear. "Oh, really?" I've heard you all say that, in one essence or another "Oh, really?" And that is good. Because you can surprise the limited self from the inner oversoul of you. And it will happen. They will come knocking on the door of your consciousness until you take a deep breath and say "Oh, okay. there must be a gift in this. There must be a truth that I either don't want to hear or I don't believe I can hear."

And yes, you set for yourself the most wonderful gifts of experiences to go places to travel and to see parts of the world that you have not seen before, so it seems. -- Not true, but so it seems -- to leave ones that you think, "I haven't met this one before." And yes, of course, you have. Everyone who comes to you is a friend from this lifetime or another lifetime. There are no accidents. You are calling to the ones who have the next piece of wisdom to share with you. And if you don't pick up on it right away, it will come back. "Oh! That's really good, because sometimes I'm not wise enough to pick up on it the first time. And so yeah, I liked the repetition. It's okay, Jeshua."

As you have agreed, it will come back to you, so that you get another opportunity to look for the richness in it. Because every situation, every encounter has a gift in it for you. And sometimes it's quite obvious. "Oh, I really liked that person. We have such fun together. We're always laughing." But sometimes, you say, "I don't want to go and see that person. They're always so morose. Everything is down. I don't like the energy."

Well, think you, and hear me well, you are the teacher, in some situations, to come bounding into relationship that seems to be heavy, and say, "Hey, lighten up!" Maybe in those words, maybe not in those words, but to be the presence of Light wherever you go. Because your fellow brothers and sisters are searching for Light. They want to know "What is good about life?"

They won't put it maybe in that way. But they may be feeling like, "Gee, you know, I've made some mistakes in this life. I thought X, Y and Z but no. Maybe X. Not Y. Certainly not Z. No, no." And yet every encounter has a gift in it. So do not be too quick to shut it out. Allow it to come to be what it is. And to say, "Okay, there must be something deeper." And there always is. Because this is how you bring it to yourself; how you give it to yourself. You dress it up or down. And you say, "I want to know why." Have you ever asked why? Of course, there is no one walking this earth that has not said in essence, "Why am I here? What am I supposed to be doing? I thought this was going to be a playground. I thought I would just take incarnation and I would have fun with it. And you know, some of it has been fun. But most of it has been a struggle." But know you the truth. The truth is, every encounter, every situation has a gift in it for you as you will look with some humor, some light heartedness.

I have seen this happen with my beloved friend and teacher. "Oh, no, not that. No!" And then it turns out, she sees another side of it. "Hey, you know, that was really fun. I'm really glad I encountered that situation, that person, etc." Look at all the experiences, the situations that I have come through." And yes, she did come to the doorstep of exiting the physical life. And yes, she did choose most voraciously to keep on living the human life. She came to that doorway, the threshold, and she said, "No, I want to stay here!" And the obvious that was being shown to the experts was that she was on her way, finished. She said "I have more to do. I have more friends that I want to interact with. Some friends I haven't even met yet. I want to meet them. There has to be more."

Those of you who are hearing this message, and you know who you are, you can take it deeply within and know that truly, you are always in control of your life: As to how long it's going to be, who you are going to interact with, what giftings you're going to see. And if you don't see it the first time, and you have experienced this, it will come back and replay so that you get a chance to look at it in a different way. A way to look at something and say, "Oh, well, there must be love in here somewhere. Oh, you mean I'm supposed to give love? Oh, I thought it was the other way around."

And then there is that Aha where the light turns on. "Okay, I will smile through it." And everyone is going to wonder, "What is he/she smiling about?" And they will sometimes come up to you and they will say, "You know, appearances look... How can you be happy with that?" Well, as long as there is breath in the body, and life going forward, count it all good. Celebrate it. Know that truly, every day is a gift that you give to yourself, even if it feels like S-H-I-T. And there are days when you encounter either occurrences or maybe another person who seems to be really down about something and you feel the energy that say "No, I don't want that energy." And yet there is a reason, a calling, for you to be with that person and to be happy to show them that yes, there can still be the smile on the face and a little bit of humor. You are very good at this, bringing to others the smile.

All of you so gathered in this afternoon evening, you are the healers. This has been said to you many times. And at first you looked upon it as the physical healing and yes, that is often a byproduct that comes along. But the healing has to do with the awareness of self, capital "S", and knowing that truly you are dancing through life, not having to struggle, not always feeling that it is the upward climb. For indeed sometimes you are on top of the mountain. You have been there, you know that feeling where the perspective you have felt: "I can see forever from this place!" Both physically, you have done this, and spiritually: "I can see - even if it's just faintly - where this path is taking me, where this life is taking me. And it is good!" What a surprise!

You have orchestrated - hear me well - you have orchestrated this life as a gift to yourself. And you're still in process of unwrapping it. So, unwrap, enjoy, be in anticipation of "What more can I experience? What is the gift in this? How can I share this gift with others and put a smile perhaps upon their face, or at least a little piece of hope that they can say there is something to be hopeful about for, if you have hope, "there must be something that I am missing. So therefore, I want what you have. I want to have a smile on the face."

And you know how to give. You never had to give to another one. The hope that yes, there is sunshine. It is not all crashing of thunder, lightning: All of the incidences that seem to be difficult. There can be good. There can be your friend who will smile at you. And you will see that smile and know that yes, "They see my light. I don't see it but they do." And that is the most beautiful gift of all.

All of you so gathered this afternoon and others that you will be interacting with, feel the gift of healing because you see them as whole. Perhaps not in the physicality, but in the spiritual. And you know that every lifetime has purpose. Every lifetime is, as you are finding out and as you are living it, it is in the gifting that you come alive. That you personally, as you see yourself to be individual, are allowed to give. And that, in itself, is a miracle.

"Jeshua, you mean, I have something to give, something to share?" Of course you do. All of you have the smile. "But I don't feel like smiling." All of you have the opportunity to have the joke book, and to have it in your hip pocket. And if everything is of heaviness, you pull out the joke book, and you say "Have you heard this one?", and they will say, "Don't bother me." And you will say, "There was this man who was walking down the road..." And there is a lesson, simple as it is, this says life is good. Because you would not - hear this well - you would not have chosen the physicality, the lifetime that you are now living, if you did not know there was reason and purpose behind it. You would have passed it by, it would not have appealed to you.

But on the spirit level, spiritual level, you have known there is an essence of happiness in it, of joy of spirit. And you have said, "I want to feel that again." Because truly you have had lifetimes - that is not something new for you and your belief system. Yes, you've had other lifetimes, and you've had lifetimes that seemed most devastating. And yet, here you are, you're still living, moving, breathing, thinking, hoping that yes, the spirit will overcome all of the human depression. Human depression is an act. It is the second act of the play. Thank God, it is the second because there's always a third act. That is the final realization that says, "Hey, you know, that was really tough to come through. I didn't think I was gonna get through it. I thought... But you know, here I am. And the sun is shining, happy to have me with them. There must be something good in this lifetime." And there is!
