Joseph Speaks: Everything Has Life

(From the 2019 Advance)

I am the one known as Joseph, earthly father to one Yeshúa, bless him. And he was a most wonderful blessing, and still is, as he shares his love with you.

It was my honor, my challenge to be earthly father to him. Those of you who are parents, you know how the little ones are blessings. And then they also can be challenges as well.

But, in truth, as you have grown in wisdom, and in allowance, you have seen that the blessings outweigh all of the challenges and the certain stretching of the parental understanding of the small ones. Because, as they will push out the boundaries, they will make you look again at what you have thought to be the way to go.

And Yeshúa was no different in some ways, as a small one, than all other small ones. He had, — and still does have — a great curiosity, wanting to know a lot of the questions of why, and how. There were times when he would be, — and he tells this story on himself — jealous of his cousin John, as you know him, John the Baptist, who was nine months older than he and of a different body type, strong and quite solid. And Yeshúa was, in his maturity, tall and strong, but a bit more willowy. But his cousin could run faster, climb a tree faster, swim faster, because he was a bit older, and of a more athletic body type.

So there were times when Yeshúa got into the human judgment of “I am not quite as good as..., I cannot run quite as fast..., I cannot climb the tree quite as fast” and judging himself and getting into a vortex of the energy that was not quite happy.

And, my advice to him, and same to you as well, if you OK are ever feeling quite closed in and angry about something, and your aura shows the red going out because you are angry at something, to go and sit by flowing water. Watch the water. It judges not. It comes to a rock and it either goes around or up and over. But it does not stand there and stew about the fact that there is a rock in front of it. It flows.

Allow yourself to come to a place, as you watch the flowing water, to come to a place of peace within yourself; to know that truly you are flowing through your life, experiencing and expressing

Has This Happened to You?

I am excited about Jeshua’s upcoming sharings with us at the meeting this month. He is saying that He will remind us of lifetimes we personally have had with Him, saying that He has had more than one lifetime (as we have had), lifetimes when we have talked with Him, walked with Him, and understood the deeper meanings of what has been shared and discussed.

He is saying that when we have recently read something that He has said, or perhaps one of His books has spoken to us, we have found it to be familiar and we wondered why it was so familiar. Has this happened to you? Or perhaps we have been turning something over in our mind, and then His voice could be heard/imagined in our mind explaining it in more detail. Has this happened to you?

He says that the Time of Unknowing grows short.

This month we have the Autumn Advance, three days/evenings with specialized workshop presentations and Evenings With Jeshua and/or the Holy Family. He says He is going to ask the question “Were You There?” each evening and you may be surprised at your inner knowing answer.

Love,

Judith

with no judgment, no judgment of self, no judgment of others. Because, in truth, life is an expression of the Light. But it is not a competitive of having to be a brighter light, or a smarter light or a more turned-on light. There is not a competition.

So, as he would sit by flowing water and come to a place of peace, there would be an understanding that everyone who expresses in this physical form has talents and abilities, each one individualized in their own way. Each one beautiful, each one expressing the God self. But there were times that I had to remind him of this.

He worked with me in the carpentry shop that we had. He helped build some of the tables and chairs and stools that ones would sit on. He could get the legs of the stool in the right place so that when one would sit on it, you did not fall over. There is a bit of technique there. It took a couple of tries for him to know the balance of where the legs would go. Same thing with a table as to get it so that it would not rock back and forth: Get the legs at the same height. So there was a bit of learning of technique, and of measurement, as well. He was a very quick study.

But there were times when his tables went a little strange and needed a bit of the equalizing underneath. We had a couple of times — we had the table that started out at arm's length, and ended up being a bit smaller table, but that was that was okay. It was a learning experience.

And yes, he did know a few choice expressions, which he used from time to time. He would not — well, he might tell you that... — I will tell you that! But yes, he helped me in the carpentry shop, and learned how to put together the wood and how to speak with the wood, how to sit with a piece of wood and ask of it, "What do you want to be when you grow up? What do you want to be? How do you want to be?" Especially with the ones that we carved, because some of the tables and the chairs that we made, were not just of useful appearance, but they were beautiful works of art, because we did some of the carving across the back or around the sides of the table as well.

I have shared with you in previous times how you can go to the place of Oneness and you ask of the wood — lovely tree that it was before the wood — "How do you want to be fashioned?" And the most wonderful language is the imagery that happens within the mind. Because as you will sit and contemplate and ask and then be silent, the wood will speak to you. And you will see, within what is called the mind's eye, you will see how the carving can be. Whether it is just straight up and down or whether it has the curls into it or whether it will go a round a corner etc.

When this first happens, it is most amazing. You know this from some of the plantings that you do. You know this from some of the trees that you have hugged and there has been a knowing of oneness as the tree is growing. Oftentimes you have seen me when I have come and visited with you, you have seen me go and feel the wood and to feel whether it is happy or not.

Everything is vibration. And so when you sit upon the chair, it is going to absorb the temporary, at least passing, energy. Everything, in truth, is alive. Even if you say “Well, the poor tree is dead. It's been chopped up,” etc. No, it is still vibrating. It is vibrating. Then when you sit and you put your energy into it, after you get up — you have had other ones tell you this — you leave a certain imprint of your vibrational energy sitting there.

“EVERYTHING IN LIFE IS VIBRATION”

- Albert Einstein

So, it behooves you to be happy. It is okay if it is temporarily a thing you are working through. The wood does not hold grievances; does not hold judgment. Vibration, yes, it holds. And then the humans come along and interpret as I have just done. but in truth the wood has the vibration. I have given to you my interpretation of it.

But the point that I am making is, Everything is alive. And if you sit quietly with anything, it will tell you a story. So try that on your morrow, when you get up and you are going through your morning meditation allow yourself to perhaps feel the bedstead, the form of the bed, and ask of it, “How was the previous night's sleep?” It will tell you. It will say “Well, he was really restless and he tossed and turned and I thought...” It will tell you a story— many stories.

What is important is to come to that place of knowing the Reality, capital “R,” of every living thing and that everything truly is alive; it vibrates. It is alive. To come to that place of melding your knowing with the knowing of what seems to be already finished, dead and gone. It is not ever! It may not move much, but it does vibrate. All of the crystalline energy that is so beautiful has great vibration.

Each crystal, different types, different formations, have their own language. And you can feel it. And you can interpret it, which you have done several lifetimes where you have been the ... what do they call the...the gemologists? —We will make up a new word. Most wondrous, the way they capture the light and shine your light back at you. You have a saying like that, “back at you.” That is what the crystals do. They reflect back to You that which you are — the Light that you are.

Ask what the crystal will share with you. Be quiet and just breathe; breathe the energy of the crystal. And it will tell you. It will give you a picture imagery of where it has come from. How it is interpreting the energy that it is.

Everything that you have created is alive. “Wow. Well, I can see that brothers and sisters, they're alive. I can see the four-footed ones, they're alive. I see the winged ones, they're definitely alive. But you say that the chair is alive?” Yes, your technology has come to a place where the vibrational frequency of something that seems to be solid can be measured. Same thing with crystals. Same thing with everything that is seemingly inanimate.

The same thing for me when I was a small one. I would pick up a rock or I would see the trees and I would think, “Oh that's a beautiful tree out there: The way it is moving and swaying with a breeze...” Then I went closer to it (I like to climb trees get a beautiful view) The tree spoke to me. What the first one said to me was “Take your dirty foot off of me!” (Smile) It did not stop me from climbing trees. It did not stop me from taking the wood that was already cut and making it into a beautiful object.

Know you that you can take a part of the trunk of a tree, and you can carve the outside and round it a bit at the bottom and you can carve out the inside. And if you are very good you can carve a certain handle on the side. It takes a bit of practice.

The first few handles I did fell off....

The same for all of you as you work with something within your home. If you take the time for it — I have noticed that sometimes you rush through the “daily chores” — allow yourself to slow down. To be in tune to feel the vibration of the furniture. Now, I know sometimes when you get tired, you just plop. Okay. but after you have rested, for a short time, begin to feel “What’s the message?” as you are sitting there. Because every part of your body has receptors. So, if you have the rear, sitting somewhere, be in tune. Ask of the chair that you are sitting on, “Who is the last person who sat on this chair and what were they like? Were they happy?” And the chair may say to you “It’s none of your business.” (Smile)

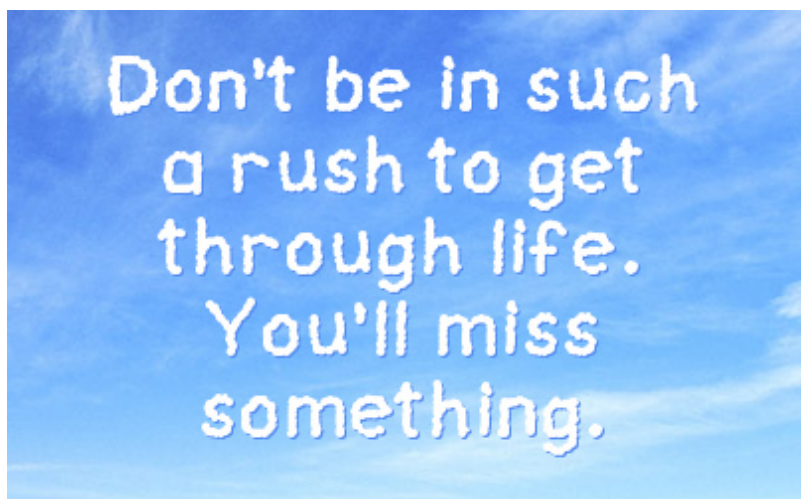

Yes, there is a language, a universal language that is understood in sensitivity. That is my message: to be happy with your surroundings, to be at one with your surroundings. Know that truly everything that you create has a life of its own. And a language which will speak to you. A person said to me when I was small, and becoming quite enamored with the vibration of wood, “How can you be caring about something that is dead? It was cut a long time ago.” And I said, “But if you listen, if you’re really asking of it and truly wanting to know, there will be a message in it for you.”

Do not rush through life. That is my message to you. When you are working with the certain texture of cloth, it will speak to you it will tell you where to cut and where not to cut. It will tell you how it wants to be fashioned. There is a certain sensitivity that you develop, perhaps not right away, but as there will be desire.

I do like that word and I will go off on a tangent here for half a minute. “Desire” is of the Father: D-e, “of”, s-i-r-e “the father” — “of the father.”

So, that is my message to you. I appreciate your attention. I appreciate your allowing me to speak. Because one earthly father of Yeshúa does not often get a chance to speak. OK no I am what you would call an “also mentioned” in the Bible. When they run their credits I am an “also mentioned.” But I would have you know that every fertilization — I guess you can call it — is divine. And yes, I was earthly father to one Yeshúa. I know you have stories that say that it was virgin birth. I knew Mary, Mother Mary as you call her. Loved her and still do very greatly. And yes, we joined and yes, Yeshúa came forth. Your holy book writes me out. (Smile)

Peace be with you.

Don't Retreat! Advance Instead!

Many organizations or businesses will have what they call “Retreats” to help people work on certain issues in their lives. Many years ago, Jeshua asked why call it a Retreat when what we were attempting to do was advance. Thus began the practice of Oakbridge sponsoring an “Advance” to help us to grow and, ... well, advance!

This year’s Fall Advance is entitled “The Ocean of Being Experience” and will be three days and four evenings of information, experience, fun and laughter as we advance together. Beginning on Wednesday evening, October 15th, and running through Saturday evening, October 21st, we will bask in the love of messages from Jeshua and/or members of the Holy Family, experience workshops designed to enhance our understanding and experience of consciousness, vibration, and the Light.

All sessions are available for both Zoom[®] and in-person participants. The cost is $25/session for in-person, while for Zoom[®] participants it will be $200 for evenings only, and $300 for all workshops and evenings. If registering after Oct. 15, the price increases $50 for all categories. You may register at:

So, come join us this October and Advance, (not Retreat) into a higher consciousness!
