Jeshua Speaks about: THE TEACHER WITHIN

APRIL 2017

Beloved one, I have been asked if I would put into form a certain teaching that could take you from the very beginning through to the place of mastery. In truth, I have given some edification in that area. You have books that are as guides to study. But I want to ask you a very basic question. When you use a study guide such as that, where does most of the study take place? In the mind.

And what I stress with you is, even if you start with concepts of the mind—which is a good place to start—the goal is to come to the place of the heart so that you, as I have been speaking to you for some years now, do not go back to square one and engage the mind solely.

Because truly, as I use words, they are not as important as the feeling. I reach out and touch each one of you, heart to heart, while the mind is busy reading the words. The mind says, “Oh, good, I can latch onto this idea. I will hold this idea.” Then another idea comes along and you forget the first one, and then you play with the second one in the mind. If you are lucky, the mind gets tired, and you get to a feeling of peace.

That is why I stress so often with you that you set aside time in each day to just breathe, to go deeply within and just breathe. Now, I know that when you start that practice in every day, if you are like most of the brothers and sisters, the mind will be busy with what has happened either the day before or in that day, and there will be certain things that you summarize in the mind: “She said this to me. That happened at work. This is what I have to think about for tomorrow. I hope I have everything prepared for dinner, and with one hundred people coming to eat...etc.”

And then, as you have practiced focusing on the breath, you can come to a place of peace within, where you come to the place where you know the feeling of expansion, the feeling of Isness, no judgment, no thoughts, just the place of peace within. I have shared with you many times, and I will reiterate, that when you find that place of peace within, the body thanks you, because the body then gets to relax without you trying to control it.

You breathe, you feel at peace, and the body expands. All of the cells of the body allow their Light to expand.

We speak often of the various texts, the writings that are as clues to set you on a path. You have many good writings that you can go to. You have many good poets, writers, musicians who have written melodies and the words to the melodies that will transport you from sitting in one place to a certain emotion. Oftentimes the music can move you in a way that nothing else can. Now, when the music moves you to a place where you find the waterworks are flowing quite freely, rejoice. Know that truly there have been

MORE ADVANCE NEWS

With the advent of Spring and, hopefully, winter behind us, we begin to realize that our Summer Jeshua Advance is only a little more than 3 months ahead. We have been hearing from our Canadian friends that hotels in Victoria are filling up fast. Victoria is a popular tourist destination, so if you have even the slightest thought to attend this summer’s Advance, it would be wise to book your accommodation NOW. The meetings will be held at the Hotel Grand Pacific (1-800-663-7550), and rooms are available there. Also, just across the street from the Hotel Grand Pacific is the Royal Scot Hotel & Suites (1-800-663-7515). There are many hotels in Victoria, from all price ranges. Go on Google and type in “Victoria, B.C. Hotels” for a list.

In addition to the hotels, many people like to group together and rent a house for the week. Check out "Victoria, B.C. Airbnb" or "Victoria, B.C. VRBO" (Vacation Rentals By Owner). And remember that prices are usually given in Canadian dollars. Multiply CAD by .70 to get approximate USD.

Some of the workshops we are lining up for the Advance include Eva McGinnis’ workshop on “Finding Your Joy” (Joy being the theme of the Advance), Mark Schrader’s “Crop Circles and Intergalactic Intelligence”, Kimberly Marooney speaking on “Angels and Angel Messages”, and more. PLUS Jeshua, Joseph, Mother lifetimes when you could not, dared not shed the tears. Rejoice every time you feel tears coming down the cheeks, because it is shows that the heart is opening.

Ones often ask me, "Master, how can I become a master? Show me, teach me, lead me to the right books to study." Depending on what seems to be the necessary next step with them, I will suggest. But oftentimes they will come back and say, "I have read the ones that you suggested. They were good. They have taken me to a certain degree upon my path, but I feel that there's more. Is there something more that I should be studying?"

When they ask that question, I know that they want something of the mind, so I suggest something that they can read for the mind. And after a while, if they have pursued the pathway a way, they will come back to me and say, I have read the books that you suggested. I have pondered them. I have questioned them. I have meditated upon ideas in those books, but I still feel that there is something more. Tell me where to go, what to do."

And I say unto them, as I have said to you sometimes. "Access the teacher within, your own teacher within." Because each and every one of you has existed from before time began, has existed from the first thought to create, and you know your path better than anyone else. You know your inner Teacher. Ask the questions of your inner Teacher.

It is okay to ask questions of brothers and sisters, because they are walking the human path and maybe what they have read will be enlightening to you. But when you get to the place where you know that there is something more, go within and ask the master within.

Because, you see, two thousand years ago you and I walked together, we sat around the campfire, we walked along the shore of the sea and shared ideas, questions. When all of that was done and you left to go back to your dwelling place or to your family or to wherever you had to go, there were questions that remained, questions that I could not truly answer. I could only answer what was true for me, as I do in this day and time.

But the one true teacher for you is the Teacher within. It is you, the master that you are, within. Now, the most wonderful part about that is, as you will be wanting to know, asking to know, really desirous to know, nothing can be held back from you. You will bring the perfect text to you. You will bring the perfect teachers to you. You will bring the perfect circumstances to you.

The inner Teacher of you never leaves you, never will abandon you. You may feel sometimes that you are abandoned, but never can you be abandoned, because the Teacher that you are within has been with you from the time you thought first to create, and you have created multitudinous worlds, realities, things to experience and to express, because you are the extension of the one creative Principle; therefore, what are you going to do? You are going to create.

And you are going to, according to the mind, judge your creations. The inner Teacher of you does not judge. The inner Teacher of you walks as you and is always accessible to you. So in truth, you do not need a teacher outside of you.

It is fun to play with someone else, to toss ideas around and say, "Well, how do you see this?" And probably, because of their inner Teacher, they may see things differently than you do, and they say, "Well, this is how I see it." And you say, "Well, let's think about that for a moment or so. Let me see how that feels." And it may or may not feel right.

Whenever there is a time when you feel confronted by someone else, breathe, and then go within, quietly, and access the Teacher, your Teacher, within. Ask for validation, because quite often what you experience with the mind in the world is non-validation. Ideas will come to the mind, and the habitual way of playing with these ideas has been to value judge, and oftentimes your judgment of yourself has come up a little bit shorter than the value that you place on someone else.

So when that happens, breathe, and ask of yourself, "What is my truth? Speak to me, inner Teacher, my inner Teacher," and listen. Again, do not value judge. Do not say, "Well, I don't think that's right, because I read somewhere in a book...etc., that it has to be thus and so."

Just listen and feel. What will be most important will be the feeling, the feeling of peace, the feeling of acceptance that, "I am okay. I may have differing ideas from other ones, but I'm still okay with my ideas. I am still okay with my values. I have value," because you do.

The world quite often wants to stamp out what you have thought your value to be. The mind will give you a whole list of how to value yourself, and quite often you find yourself down near the bottom of the list, because that is what habitually the generational teaching has been. You have been taught that as little ones. "You don't know anything. You have to listen to me," say the parents or the older brother or sister. You do for a while, and then you begin to think, "Well, that's not quite how I see things, and I'm not quite sure that's where I am with that."

Listen to your inner Teacher. Do not be confrontational with another one, because their inner Teacher may be bringing up for them what they have said that their soul wants to experience. But value your inner Teacher, because that Teacher is true for you. It is important for you to know your value and to speak, even when others may not listen to you. Allow yourself to value yourself and your inner Teacher.

Read the books. Question things. Discuss. Then take it in meditation to the Teacher within. That Teacher within, when you are being totally open, non-judgmental, will lead you to the Truth of your being.

I can speak these words to you now, because you are in a place where you understand; not only with the mind, but with the open Heart. I can speak these things to you as I did two thousand years ago when we had fun throwing the ideas back and forth, because we did. We liked to use the tool of the mind, so we played with the mind. And you have done that in the early years of this lifetime, because the mind is a great plaything. If you will treat it as such, you will not go wrong.

But the heart speaks true. So whenever you get the feeling of the fingernails on the chalkboard and you wonder what is going on, breathe, and then ask the inner Teacher, "How do you see what is going on?"

Every time you ask your inner Teacher, you will get an answer. You may not hear it. You may not want it. You may not trust it, but you get an answer which you can come back to and see if the answer is the same next time as well. Allow yourself to trust the inner Teacher, because it will be true; not the mind, but the feeling of the heart.

You will have fun with it. The mind already is having fun with it, but the heart says, "So what? I love, I Am, I Be, forever and always."

So go to the place within and ask your inner Teacher, "Speak to me. Love me." That is a very powerful one. Go to the inner Teacher and ask, "Love me." The feeling that will wash over you will be with you forever. It will be powerful, transportive, and will be forever, as I am with you. I walk with you now. Speak to me from time to time.

I give you a promise. Two thousand years ago I gave you a promise, that, "Lo, I am with you always, even until the end of the world." That will be a good thing to celebrate. I am with you always, and I love that which you are, because that which you are is the One that we are, have been, will be, forever outside of time.

Speak to me during the day. If you really want to get my attention, tell a funny, a joke. I enjoy laughter. Peace be with you now and forevermore.

JESHUA Q & A

IMMIGRATION & TRUMP

Anything you want to say about the political developments in the last two weeks? [Early February 2017]

You are having most fun with this, aren't you?

Well, sometimes it vacillates from being kind of scared about it to saying, "Okay, we've got front-row seats," Jeshua says. "We've got front-row seats to see this." But then there are sometimes when I identify like with the immigrants, having been one, a refugee, and what people are experiencing with that. So is that going to get any better? Are people coming together enough to make a difference?

Yes. This is truly what is happening with all of the seeming drama of it. Ones are taking it within themselves and asking, "How does this fit with my moral compass? Is this loving? Is this supportive? Is this recognizing the Oneness of everyone who has taken form and is walking the face of our holy Mother Earth, but related to each other at a very deep level? Is this out-picturing the Truth—capital "T"—of the situation?"

As you have seen, many times the initial decision and decree has been from a place of very narrow understanding. This one [Trump], as we have shared many times, is trying to relive lifetimes where he has been the king or the warrior who was in charge. He has replicated that by being in charge of his business, which, by the way, is very far-flung, but not bringing in so many of the golden coins as he would like to see, but that is being hidden away meantime.

But he is coming from a place of all-knowing, and yet when someone questions him, he is not happy about that, because in the incarnations that he is drawing upon, he has been the one who gave forth the decree as to what had to be. You have a story in your literature—it is often in the children's books—of the emperor who had the most finely-made clothing, and all of the ones around him said how fine he looked, how beautifully tailored all of his clothing was. He would go out in public, and everyone had their instructions to say how wonderfully dressed he was.

Until this little boy happened by and said, "Why does the emperor have no clothes on?" Well, that is happening now. Ones are pointing out that perhaps the decrees that he is giving out are not coming from a place of understanding, and he is not happy about that. But he is creating his reality as he is going along moment by moment, and at the soul level he desires to awaken to his Oneness with everyone else who is activating the bodies and everyone else of the soul group, although that does push his thinking at this point.

But he is wanting to awaken, so he has, by means that he didn't really understand, somehow been given the crown of responsibility. Now, the crown he likes; the responsibility he doesn't know how to handle. But he is learning.

Someone today likened him to the wizard behind the curtain, like the Wizard of Oz, pretending to be big and scary, and he's behind there with his fake police....When I think about him like that, then it's like, okay, I can see that, but...

And it is, as you have seen, giving others opportunity to come forward and open their hearts to the ones who are seemingly being threatened. So there is much that is happening that would not have been happening if it hadn't been playing out the way it is playing.

My heart still goes out to all those people who are being targeted. They've lived in this country all their lives, and all of a sudden they're being singled out and taunted or abused or in some way degraded because of who they are or what their religion is. I mean, that's not our country. It shouldn't be that way.

But I do believe he came to change the world (Oh, yes) and that's what's going to happen (That is happening)

SUFFERING

Previously when someone asked about the necessity of people suffering, you said that people truly are not suffering. Can you explain a little bit more to my human mind how that is possible?

It is very difficult to explain it to the human mind. But in truth, as we have said many times, you make your own reality—lower case "i"—by your thoughts. You have been taught to think that others can suffer, are suffering, because you have at times put yourself into where you think they are, and the feeling that you would have if you were in that space. But in truth, that is your reality. In Truth—capital “T”—it is not their reality. It may be, or it may just be what you have invited to be shared with you as a seeming truth; in other words, someone is reporting that all of this is happening. But it is happening truly in your reality—lower case “r”—because you are the one who is making that reality.

Now, I know, it makes the mind go round in circles, but that’s okay. That’s what the mind is for, is to have fun, to play around with various ideas and not to worry yourself about it. If there is something that you can do to change it, you will do it. If it is not something that you can do to change it at that point, you take the deep breath and walk on. Allow the heart to love. Allow your energy to be in love, and if you want to pick a target, a place to send that love, send it to ones who are seemingly experiencing non-love.

Open the heart and send love, because truly the blessing in it is as it is shared outward, it has to come through you, and it blesses you as you are giving it forth. So nothing is ever lost. Everything serves a purpose. But to sit and to worry and to feel...well, your religious/philosophical teachers, as they have been called, often would say that you have to suffer, that the world is made as a place to suffer (And it’s Lent, so we should be doing that) YES. Now, how come you are not down on your knees, 23 hours out of the 24, suffering? Am I not worth all of your suffering? I suffered for you. Look at my hands (Exactly) Exactly, okay. NO, you don’t have to buy it. I’m not even selling it (Good, because I’m not buying it anymore) Very good.

That was something so wonderfully freeing when you told us that many years ago, that you did not suffer on the cross. As children we were made to feel so guilty that you suffered so much for us.

Right; but no. First of all, I did not suffer, because I had learned to disassociate my self from the body, and this can be done in this day and time as well, and has been shown. You even have a video that has shown this. So it can be done, still can be done. It was not an isolated incident that I did. It can be re-proven.

And no, you did not cause it. Again, I was making my reality, was I not? Yes, I was. And I said, “I do not want all that pain in it,” so at some point in the development of my understanding of incarnation and physicality, I practiced, learned how to disassociate myself from the body. Did the body feel pain? In truth, it didn’t, because there was nothing to receive that “knowing” of pain. So the body did not suffer either. It looked a mess, but (It didn’t suffer either; wow) it didn’t suffer either, no. So do not worry your pretty little mind and heart about it.

FALLING FROM A HEIGHT HOLDING HANDS

I have encountered a poem that’s going through my head for whatever reason, by Gary Snyder who is a Pacific Northwest poet living down in the Sierra Nevada someplace. It’s called, Falling from a Height, Holding Hands. “What was that? Storms of flying glass and billowing flames. A clear day to the far sky—better than burning, hold hands. We will be two peregrines diving all the way down.”

So that’s about 9/11 and the fact that an estimated two hundred people fell from the building. Using the word “jumped” is controversial, because people really didn’t jump; they were forced from the heat. But that notion of making a decision to hold hands, I think there was one couple whose photograph was taken of that. It just amazes me...there has to be an incredible consciousness shift right there at the window (Yes) to be peregrines, which are the world’s fastest animal, clocked at 242 mph in a dive.

It just stretches the imagination to imagine that people would make that kind of quantum leap of consciousness where they would become like two peregrines diving all the way down. Of course, this society doesn’t...that idea of people jumping to their deaths and being forced by the evildoers, and assuming that everybody went out in terror all the way down, when that might not have been the case at all. I guess my question is, in most cases was there a consciousness shift, or in a few cases, or what’s your sense of how those people who fell to their deaths...what was going on in their consciousness, in general?

In general, it was a feeling truly of fear first, and then a feeling of freedom. And the instantaneous landing, yes, totally erased whatever fear had been the motivating force in the beginning. That was erased. But yes, there was a mixture of feeling, because there was the excitement, terrible, as we would judge it to be. And there was the feeling of Oneness with the ones holding hands, and yes, that did happen.

For other ones, it was a feeling of, “This is something I’ve wanted to try in physicality,” so they did. Now, they would not come and consciously say to you, “Well, you know, this is something I always wanted to do, is to jump out of the 18th story of a high-rise building,” but when the choice was already made and they stepped forward to do it, there was a feeling of, “Well, this is an experience, a bit of excitement, if you will.” It varied from person to person, of course.

Would perception of time slow down?

Mmm, yes and no, because they found themselves outside of body, truly even before they hit bottom, because there was a consciousness shift, as you have said. Did time slow down? I suppose they would say their experience was that, especially as they were freed of the body.

BAD RAP FOR JUDAS ISCARIOT

Let's talk about my buddy, Judas. (Alright, you know him well) Oh, good. I like him (Good) I do not understand why people hate him. I understand how it's taught. People condemn the very person that they, in the way they understand their faith, couldn't be where they are, had it not been for him (This is true) The guy did a dirty job. He had a nasty job to do. He had to do it. He gets a bad rap.

He has moved beyond it, you know.

Well, he needs to drop in and talk to me about it then.

Oh, good. Look for him. He will drop in and talk with you. He was one of my best friends; still is. He said he would serve me from the beginning, as he was called, and he did serve me, and there needed to be someone who would be the messenger. So he did it, and I thanked him for it.

Okay, I've had that figured out for a long time. I'm just glad you said it.

Good. It goes on record.

HELPING THE LOST

I have a question about the request that you made that we sit in silence and invite those who are no longer in body and are looking for the Light. Are there not beings and angels and even yourself who are welcoming these folks who have crossed?

Some of them do not know that they have crossed and left the body, and they are wondering why they cannot take the glass, why they cannot take the puff of smoke, why they cannot open the door, but they just walk through it. They see what has been the 3D world, and they can watch you and things that are going on here, and yet when they speak, you don't pay any attention to them, and they get quite upset about that from time to time.

They see Light. They see when there is a group such as this sitting in Light, and they are drawn to the Light, and yet they do not know that they are no longer with body; they think that they are, but they aren't. So when we speak to them, they do not hear us, but they do hear you, because they are still focused on you. They are still focused on the 3D world. That is why when you do a small grouping and you sit in the Light and invite ones who are around, in any case, to make their presence known to you—and they will—then you can advise them.

First of all, you can congratulate them that they have moved on, that they have left the body, that they are so-called dead but still alive, and you can say to them to look over their left shoulder. It is the most simple. You could say right shoulder, you could say get down on bended knees, you could say anything, but what seems to work best is, just tell them to look over their left shoulder. That takes their focus away from here, from the 3D, and then they are a bit open to, "Well, what am I going to find?" and oftentimes then they will see an angel or us or a person who has already deceased the body and are there to help them along. What needs to be is to break the focus of where they are looking at the 3D and to look somewhere else.

For ones who are prepared in their thinking that they have deceased the body and that they have moved into another realm, it is no problem for them. Oftentimes they will go immediately to a family member or someone they have been very close to. They will recognize this one coming to them out of the Light, or sometimes if their belief is strong that they are going to meet me, they will see me coming out of the Light to greet them. Other ones who haven't really thought too much about it or have had the belief system built up where they do not feel worthy, it takes a bit of rest for the change to happen.

PREVIOUS RESURRECTIONS

Weren't you a master who had previously come in and done resurrections in other lifetimes?

Yes, but I do not tell it too much (Laughter) (Is it in our legends of others who had done it before?) Yes, this is true (That you were of that lineage and had done that before) Yes, and so are you. Because, in truth, the holy Child is One. The holy extension of the Father is One. There is no separation, in truth. Bodies speak of separation, but that is not true. You are spirit, you are energy, you are the energy that activates the body all the time. You are the energy of love. It feels so good.

So I leave the story of one Yeshu'a having the resurrection, because it seems to have impact. But yes, I had done this before. And all of you, as you understand the story of the resurrection, as you can relate it, you can kind of get a feeling for it; maybe not exactly that you would step out and do it, but you can kind of have a place that you can relate to it, understand it; it makes a little bit of sense that one could be energy and could reactivate a body and come back again.

So for you, you understand the unlimitedness of yourSelf. You are coming to remember it once again. For others who want to read the holy book and believe that only one Jesus could do this, then I let that stand. So I do not go around telling it too much, but it is true.
