Jeshua Speaks about: THE VALUE OF A HUMAN LIFE

Beloved one, I would speak with you about the value of your life. Does it really matter that you are here on the Earth in physicality having this experience?

Yes, it matters. Your life is a gift. It is truly a gift that you as the point of the soul group have chosen. You have chosen that you will be here to have experience, that you will have free will, which you do have. Perhaps your will and your choices get a bit molded and shaped by the generational teaching and by what ones have said to you is important, but then you get a bit taller and you say, "Well, I don't know if it's really that important, that I have to, first thing in the morning, comb the hair and brush the teeth. I wonder what would happen one day if I didn't comb the hair and brush the teeth." You have tried it out, and you have lived to go the next day to comb the hair and brush the teeth.

Life in physicality is a gift that you give to yourself to experience and to express the Light that you are, the vibration that you are. You are vibrating within a certain narrow bandwidth, as they call the vibration.

You interact with each other and give each other gifts of different experiences. Sometimes in the romantic love...I will speak about that for a moment or so, because I know it well. I had a most wonderful romantic experience with my Miriam, Mariam, Mary. We were totally and completely in love. From the moment that we met, there was an alignment that we felt and a magnetic attraction, if you want to call it that, that brought us together into a higher vibrational frequency which you have known, and when you are in the space of that vibrational frequency, you want nothing else but that feeling. That is why you search for it, and it is truly one of the steps to coming to the place of knowing your perfection as Love itself.

Ones have often asked me the question, "Well, Yeshu'a, isn't that sort of a sidetrack if I get into romantic love and feel that it is the be all and end all of everything, and doesn't that take me off on a sidetrack where I no longer search for the true Love that I am?"

Truly you are not going to stop at that place, because you are going to want more. You will perfect it, you will live it, you will experience it, and if it happens to change form, as it will do from time to time, you still desire it. You still seek for it, search for it, desire to know the feeling of love. So it will take you to the next step or the next stage of wanting to know your true nature.

Your true nature is to be totally alive in the expression of love, and romantic love is the first step; well, maybe the second step. We will go to friendship first and then romantic love. It is something that you fashion for yourself in order to know that there can be more.

Oftentimes in family situations, there

ANNOUNCING: CHANGES

As Jeshua has been telling us for some time now, we are in the midst of changes in our experience of life. So, we at Oakbridge University and Press have an announcement of change: as of June 1st we have moved the offices of the Oakbridge work to a new location. The office telephone number remains the same (360-681-5233), and, even though we have a new location, please use our Post Office address \(Box 485\) in Sequim \(98382\) for more prompt service.

The office location is on a hillside. From the deck there is a panoramic view of the ocean (Strait of Juan de Fuca) looking to the islands and Canada. You can see Victoria from here (well, sort of). Plenty of hummingbirds, deer and raccoon (no, I haven't seen the raccoons, but I have been told they will climb the deck and eat bird seed from the feeder!)

Many thanks to the wonderful moving crew, and special thanks to Ted Meske, Eva and Roger McGinnis, Bill and Kathy Evans for the great personal assistance. And hugs to Kathleen Peifer and Elaine Starz for the fun Yard Sale!

One of the beautiful gifts of knowing so many of the Heart Family (Jeshua's and Mother Mary's spiritual Family) is the richness of sharing special times (like when one needs help of any kind, not limited to moving, of course) with friends gathered over the years. Many of us have come together from various is not the experience of love. Oftentimes even well-meaning parents, because they want you to be as perfect as possible, will give forth what they have been taught perfection has to be or should be. Sometimes those rules and the enforcement of the rules have not been so pleasant, and you have thought of what Home feels like, what love feels like—because there is a faint memory; sometimes not so faint—and you feel a longing for Love.

The young one growing up, even the babe in arms, can feel the difference between love and non-love, and you are always searching for it, to come Home again. So when you find someone in a romantic situation who looks at you and says, “You are the most perfect person; I love you,” and they look with the eyes of love, and you look at them and return the love, at that moment the relationship comes together in love, in what I am going to call the first level of love. Then you go on to know the person better, to experience with them more and more, and you become very rich in the experiences.

Sometimes you become more rich than you wanted to be, if this one is perhaps coming from a different place, and yet there is love between you, so that you get to experience a whole range of romantic love. It is good, because oftentimes you get to hone, to kind of shave off the parts that are not like love and come to the core of love. It may be when they are no longer in form sitting next to you or in the next room. It may be when they have moved on that you begin to feel their presence and their love and to know that truly what you shared with them was Home. It was love. It was in the first stages.

So when ones come to me and say, “But human love is not really something to be sought; isn’t it a waste of time; should I not be just meditating and coming to that place of love within myself,” I say to them, “You can live that, and you have in many other incarnations where you stayed in the monastery and perfected the meditative experience to the place where you disowned the body.” But this lifetime, for the most part, you have come and said, “I want it all. I want the body, I want to know love, I want to know romantic love, and I want to go from that place to understanding my Allness.” And you will get there. So, romantic love? Yes, of course, you want that.

Now, you are whole and perfect at any time, so you do not need another one to complete you, but when you are in love, even in the first stages of it, it allows you to move out of yourself. You have had that feeling of being in love with someone, or even some thing, to the place where you forgot about yourself. The object of your love was the only thing which was important, and your attention was very much fixed on your perception of how you were and how they were with you.

It was, as I have said, a good first step. Then perhaps they did something to kind of tick you off, and you said, “Hmm, I have to think about that.” If they did enough of the things that ticked you off and you did a few things in retribution, you might come to the place where you say, “Okay, I think we have completed with each other,” and you have gone your separate ways. That is good. That is okay, because you have gained a knowing of love, an essence of love, even when they were really ticking you off—I have heard that expression; I do not know exactly what the ticking is, but I understand the feeling.

So you move from the place of desiring to know the divinity of yourself as you move through human love, as great as it is—and it is; when it is good, it is very, very good; and when it is bad, it still has value.

When we meet another one who is very much mirroring to ourselves something that we are not wanting to own, at least we get to know it and to work through forgiveness (giving love for) of ourselves and others, and understanding what has prompted the behavior: why it has taken root in oneself, and then to let it go. It changes the energy to the place where you see things anew.

What is the value of a human life? Why live a human life? Or if you are in another galaxy and have another form that may not be quite the same as a human form, what is the value of the physicality or individuality of an incarnation? It is fun to experience. It is a gift to yourself to be able to move, to have opportunity to know love, and to go beyond even the human love or the individuality to the place of the Allness of the Love which you are.

Human love or love of the seeming individual is as a doorway through which you walk at some time, at some point, into the Allness that you are, into knowing that, “I am One with all that I see. I am in love with all that I see. Then I see myself in everything, as everything, and I love mySelf. And when I move through that doorway, I see that nothing in the individual expression takes away from the Allness of Love.”

You are having that opportunity come up in front of you right now in your geo-political activities. “I and my brother/sister are One: we have a human incarnation; we have a human body; we want the same things in life no matter what the body looks like, no matter what the history seemingly is or whether the form has been incarnated in this Earthly geographical place many times; no matter if your family has always been here; no matter if you have much or little of the golden coins.

Beyond physicality to the essence of Who you are, all are the same. All are One in Love. You are having that shown to you by a great teacher right now, a teacher who does not know that he is a teacher, but he is. He is a great master who has volunteered to play a certain part, and he is so caught up in the part that he does not know that he is playing a part. And he is bringing it in front of everyone’s eyes to see, “How would it be if I acted that way?”

So, some of the ones who think they are in alignment with him are trying to act the same, but that is not going to last. Only love abides forever. They may act out, and it will be for a time, because upon this plane things are temporal and temporary, so it is changing and will change. It is not going to stay the same. But it gives you great opportunity to see it acted out and to see the expressions upon the faces.

He is in a place of questioning, a place of confusion. “Why, if I give an order—which I used to do even as recently as a year or so ago in my business—why is it not followed? Why are people rising up and saying something different? Why can they not see that I am speaking what needs to be followed through?”

Because you are all great masters; that is why. And you are all on a journey to come Home again, to come Home to the Love which values Oneness. So this journey sometimes takes a bit of the twists and turns, and right now you are seeing in stark contrast what happens when ones feel that they can make decisions unilaterally and seemingly affect others.

It is a teaching method. It is a back door teaching method, but it is teaching. And this one who is putting forth the statements believes that that is how he wants it to be. Then there are other ones who see things differently, other ones who are saying, “No, I don’t buy that. I’m not paying for that. I’m not having that.”

You live in a time right now of great change, opportunity for great change, and it will be happening. The only question is how fast it happens. It may take some generations yet, or not. That has not been decided. That is yet open. I do not prophesy, because whatever I would say at one time, you will turn around and change it, because you have free will, and that is a good thing.

Truly, as it is seen now, there is a great momentum for change and for inclusion of ones coming together. Because ones have been through many lifetimes where there has been the warrior chief, the king who has perhaps inherited, but quite often has come through the battles in order to supposedly win his power—or her power, because it has not always been the male; oftentimes in pre-history, as some of the young ones like to call it, a long time ago there have been women who made the decisions, who were in power—and yet you are always in your power, and that is what is coming to the forefront: your power, the power of choice.

So ones are making their voices heard. They are standing up to be counted; not only in this geo-political grouping, but across the face of our holy Mother, the Earth. Ones are saying, “We’ve been there, done that; complete.” So they are coming out to be counted.

You have chosen incarnation at this time to be part of the voice which speaks for Oneness, which speaks for inclusion rather than division, which speaks for wanting to find commonality and to revere and respect a common Source. It is a most exciting time to be here. For some it can be seen as a fearful time, because the future, as they see it, could hold threat to the way of life that they want to have.

However, there are many voices, as it is seen now, who are choosing to know Oneness, to know respect. The one who is playing leader wants to know respect; it is one of the lessons in this lifetime for him: to learn respect for all. As he will learn true respect for himself as the Self which he is, he will know respect for others. You have chosen—and rightly so, because you have done it in other lifetimes—to be here at a time of change.

So, what is the value of a life? It is the opportunity to come Home, the opportunity to be incarnate and at the same time to know all of the attributes of Love—with a capital “L”. This is the state of being which you have characterized as the Christ, being incarnate and loving, knowing Oneness with everything that you see in front of you, knowing that truly you are perfection, that you are love—walking on two feet, yes; reaching out with the two arms to hug others, to love them, to bring yourself to that realization that wherever I am is Love—capital “L”.

That is the value. You have opportunity in every hour, every minute, to rise up into that place of the Christ, the recognition that, “I am the Christ incarnate,” and you are.

“I AM THE CHRIST INCARNATE” YES, YOU ARE

I would suggest that you write that on one of your cards and put it up someplace where you will see it every day—on your refrigerator, your mirror, somewhere—“I am the Christ incarnate.” Because you are. You have forgotten it. You have become so immersed in all of the mind activities, all of the worries and fears of the world and working your way through them, that you have forgotten your essence. You have forgotten from whence you have come. You have forgotten Who you are, What you are. “I am the Christ incarnate.”

When I spoke unto you two thousand years ago, I spoke to the Christ of you. We walked together, we laughed together, the laughter that you know deep within you. We laughed often because we knew that we were the Christ putting together our reality—lower case “r”—for the sheer joy of it.

Now, the Romans did not always agree with that message, so it was a time quite similar to what you are having now, when there seemed to be ones with power over the body, over the incarnation. But as you have read the story, and as it has been passed down to you one generation to another, I did not stay in the tomb. I had more fun being in joy. I had to come out of the tomb to walk with my brethren and sisters again. I used to say “sistern” until it was pointed out to me that that is a certain type of well [cistern]. Once in a while I try to be as you are and bring a bit of humor into the world. Laugh easily and often, because the Christ does.

You are the Christ love incarnate. That has gotten slightly covered over with the teachings which have been handed down to you. Your ones of the religious/philosophical orders down through time have again been swayed by power, wanting to have power, wanting to control. So the message has been that there has been only one Christ. Well, that is true and not true. You are the Christ in many different incarnate forms trying to find each other, looking as one of the philosophers with his lantern, “Are you the Christ?”—Yes, you are—going to one, to another, and looking to see, “Are you the Christ?” Yes, you are. You are the Christ incarnate for a time, because you have said you will come and be outrageous enough to speak words to other ones that sometimes are a bit strange, and yet it awakens them. It is something that they have asked to know. So you give them a clue, and you maybe shake them up a bit.

I walk in your merchandising places, and I walk with some of your fellow Christs. Sometimes I whisper in their ear, “Who are you? What are you searching for? Are you going to find it on the shelf?” And they are looking and looking and looking. They say, “I don’t find exactly what I want.” Of course they do not. They already have it. They are already the Christ incarnate. They are already much more than they could ever ask for.

The value of a lifetime is the gift that you are always unwrapping, the gift that you are finding for yourself, that is yourself, the Christ of you. Lifetime after lifetime you search high and low. Up in the clouds. Is it there? Under the rocks. Is it there? And all the time it is right here. And you find that as you give it, more is given to you. In other words, it flows through you. And if you do not give it, it gets stopped up and cannot move. So give, love, laugh—because the Christ would. So be it.

parts of Holy Mother Earth to find each other again in this lifetime, no matter the physical distance, to share in the Awakening through the Summer and Winter Advances. Again this year we will be gathering to hear messages from Jeshua, Joseph, Mother Mary and Mary Magdalene, as well as Masters in human form (known as our fellow humans) in their sharings. Friendships made at the Advances (formerly known as Retreats) often give rise to life-long support friendships that last way beyond the week we spend together. This summer's Advance will be the week of July 23rd through Friday, July 28th in Sequim, Washington. Check out the Schedule of Events included with this newsletter.

See you at the Mountain!

THE MORNING CALL

Let me always remember that I am a privileged guest in this sacred place.

I am here to both enjoy and edify its beauty.

Let me reach out and touch others who may be blinded to the gifts of creation, reminding them that our Holy Mother Earth and Her angels wish only to share Love. Wonderment and awe they also share. These are the gifts they offer.

In this house, their house, let me learn to not only tend and nurture the wondrous environment, but also to offer my fellow guests a share of my visions, hopes and aspirations that they may bless the Earth and this day with Love.

Paraphrased from a Pueblo Indian invocation, in Ceremonies for Change by Lynda S. Paladin.

JESHUA Q&A

HOW MANY REALMS?

Previously I asked a question about what happens if someone who is not so nice on this realm transitions to the next realm, and you said that you and others would be there to work with that person (Oh, yes) So the obvious implication is that we don't become instantly enlightened just because we transition (Right) But I guess the follow-up question to that is, how many realms are there? Are there realms above that realm? And are there entities working with you to make you more enlightened? I mean, where does this all end?

It does not. You have discerned well, that it keeps on going, going forward, creating, experiencing. There are realms beyond anything you can imagine, and it is good. We have decreed that whatever we create has a blessing in it, and even if it feels like manure, it just makes a stronger plant or tree out of you. So you are doing well with it.

And yes, when ones transition, what they held to be as a belief system at that moment continues on, because they are holding it, until at some point, which is outside of time, there is a feeling that seeps in like warm bathwater. It flows over them; a place of peace, a place of healing, and then they are able to hear the voices of loved ones who have gone and said, "I know things are different now, the voices of masters, because each and every one of you is a master, but each and every one of you has several masters working with you even on this plane. And when you leave the focus of the body, they are still working with you, they are still speaking to the one that you have asked about, and at some point, very soon, she is going to feel the peace, that she can let it all go.

All of the self-hatred can be let go, the self-judgment, all of the times that she has felt she failed and therefore had to act out. And then she will know that she is made of good stuff, and that truly she is loved. The masters are working with her. (Thank you) Thank you for asking.

JESHUA BACK IN PHYSICAL FORM?

Two thousand years ago you lived in a physical body form, and we've been told before that you lived in that form for six hundred years or so before you transitioned to a different dimension (Right) We've also been told that you currently are a starship captain above the Earth (Right) So I guess the question is, are you back in a physical form? Is the starship a physical starship? Or what is that all about?

It can be. Now, you create everything that you experience. You are a great creator. You have specific focus upon this moment, this physical moment with the physical body that you're expressing with, with the voice, with the eyes, what you see. You are creating this moment as we are speaking. But you are also able to tune in to other realities, other frequencies where you can be what seems to be, to this focus right here, strange and unbelievable.

And yet as you return to the place from whence you have come, the great energy, you can be and focus upon any reality—lower case “r”—that you want to. And you, because you are the creator, you can be with that focus for a while, say half an hour, say five minutes, say twenty years, whatever.

I am able to express as the Intelligence—it’s a good way to put it—as the being that I am, the Intelligence—capital “I”—anywhere I want to be. So ones have tuned in to me as being in the starship. Now, for the rest of you focusing upon this physicality here in this reality, that seems very strange. But when you remove yourself from the very specific focus upon this reality, you understand how you can express in other realities in seemingly the same slice of time, because time is of your making. All, truly, is of your making. I would suggest that you don’t try to confuse yourself too much. Just say, “Well, it could be,” and leave it at that.

(Another Comment): So, as you say, all of the things that we view on television, the movies, the programs, all of the books that we read, we are creating that (Yes) And so we just want to be in those stories for a while (Right, that is why you can be on the edge of your seat as you are watching a movie: Is he going to love her, or isn’t he? Is he going to survive, or isn’t he?) But we’re a part of that story, too (Yes, in that moment) So we’re a part of everything that we think about, everything we choose to see, as much as we’re a part of snails and frogs or whatever we’re into at the moment (Right) So we’ve created everything on television (Yes) and all those stories. We’re really good (Yes) I mean, that’s a lot of things. And it’s so much more than that. It’s much bigger than that (Much bigger) I mean, it’s all of the things on TV and the whole world and all the languages and everything, just for our entertainment (Exactly, and all of the languages that you’ve forgotten) Wow!

It is enough to blow the mind, and at the same time, you have agreed that you are going to focus upon this reality, for the most part. It’s enough to handle. You can be, from time to time, superman. You can live in the other realities and play with them, but your main focus is who and what you see yourself to be in this lifetime right now and to interact with the brothers and sisters in a compassionate, understanding way, a way that moves more Light into the dark. Allow yourself to be blown away from time to time, because it is the truth of your being, and it is what you need to acknowledge; not to the point of confusion, but to the point of saying, “Wow, how wonderful God/Goddess is. Thank you for grasping that.

COMMITTING SUICIDE

Why do some people come into this world and quit, I mean commit suicide? Do they have this as part of their lessons, or was this their choice, or is this just avoiding this hard world by aborting the mission because it was too much?

Yes, it is aborting the mission, but they will get another chance. No life is ever lost. Every life is an expression of the divine. It is Light. And if ones find that they do not see their own Light and they want to be out of the darkness that they feel, they have choice. But they also have choice to reincarnate another time and to perhaps change some of the parameters so that they keep on living a little bit longer.

Now, the question would be, does the person who lives 90 or 99 years have a more worthwhile life than one who has lived only a day? In truth, no. If they have been serving their purpose...there are ones who serve a purpose to be born of woman and live only one day to bring to that one person, or two if it is a family, the experience of love, even if it’s just for one day. They are serving a purpose. Do they stay forgotten somewhere? No, they turn right around and incarnate again, sometimes in the very same family, or perhaps in another family, but they have choice.

Sometimes they will come and live maybe a week or whatever, for the purpose of allowing ones to open their heart and love. There is no guilt. You cannot take another one’s life. First of all, life is on-going. Secondly, you cannot take another one’s incarnate form. You can make it look like they choose that they see that they want to allow the body to be gone, but you cannot take another one’s life. It is only by choice. That is why you have sometimes on the battlefield two standing right next to each other with the—what do you call that—rapid fire, and one will perish and the other one may be riddled with all kinds of holes, but he survives. You cannot take another one’s life.
