

THE WALL

Beloved and holy and only Child of our heavenly Father, Child of the one Source, Child of Light, divine. That is who you are. Take it deeply within the consciousness and contemplate what that means. Child of Light, Child of the one Source.

I am the one known as Jeshua ben Joseph, Jesus you have called me, and it is in great joy that I come to abide with you this evening in your timing as you have chosen once again to call me forth. Great joy of reunion; great joy to know that truly life is forever on-going. And that which we have shared in what you would call times past and in times that you would call to be future, we have been together enjoying—being in joy—remembering.

That is why you are here this evening. It is to remember, to touch that place of knowing that truly you have come once again to take upon yourself a form of a body so that you can speak, so that you can hear, you can see, one way or another; to interact with each other and to be amongst friends, because truly that is who and what you are.

The word friend is a derivation of meaning equal. You are equal to me. Now, I know that your holy Fathers have said, "Well, that cannot be. One Yeshu'a, one Jeshua, one Jesus spent some time with you teaching you." In truth, I did not teach. I called forth what you already knew. "Then he allowed the body to be finished, and there was a most beautiful Light, and he ascended unto what has been known as heaven."

Now, I would speak with you about heaven, because heaven is not up there any more than it is below. I know that your holy Fathers have said to you, "You'd better behave, you'd better read the right books—if you can read at all—you'd better listen to the words that I speak to you. And if you do what all of the more well-versed teachers will tell you, you will go to heaven; you will ascend. Woe unto you if you should descend, because there is the fiery pit that will burn off all of the refuse and make you Light again."

But in truth, there is nowhere that you can go that is apart from what and where and who you are right now. Ones who have released the body and have said, "Okay, you know, I played with it for a while," they find themselves awakening, and they are still alive. They are still knowing existence. They are still knowing.

In truth—now, hear this well—they hear you much better after they have released the body than they did when you were in the body and focused on something that you wanted to tell, think about, be engrossed in. When there is not the body to have to drag around, they are very much in the Allness of spirit, and a lot of the containment, as you see the physical body to be, a lot of that containment disappears.

So there is an expansion that is allowed. Now, not everyone takes advantage immediately of the expansion. There are ones who are very much tied into the understanding of that lifetime that has so recently been seemingly completed, so they very much are focused on what seems to be here, and yet to speak in words such as here is not complete truth, because the here is All, everything.

So you may have a loved one who has released the body, passed on, whatever you want to call it, and you feel there is a presence. You feel perhaps, "Oh, that sounded like _____," and you feel their presence, you feel their energy. It is very, very true that they are with you, because...do you remember? Do you remember the one all-encompassing statement that I have made over and over? Because there is no separation. I try to reinforce this idea every time we meet, because there is no separation.

So you may feel that someone has released the body, and you think, "Oh, no, they're gone, and I can't talk with them. I can't hear them; I don't know." No, that is limited thinking. They are around you anyway, much more tuned in to you than ever when there was focus upon the body; much more open and receptive to what you are feeling, what you are thinking, what you are questioning.

And they are quite happy when you are happy. When you are going through a sad and mournful time, they take that as a compliment, but they don't wish for you to stay in that space, because life is about living. Life is about joy. Life is about expansion. So you congratulate them that they have moved on to an advanced degree or study, whatever you want to call it, and you say, "Okay, give me a clue from time to time" about whatever you are thinking about, whatever you are moving into. What comes then is guidance.

Now, you have had teaching that you cannot trust that guidance. You have had teaching that has said, "Oh, well, if he played tricks in the lifetime, he's going to still play tricks on you now."

You do not have to worry. You have a compass within you that knows what is truth, and that is what I want to speak of this evening. I want to speak of when you come to a place that feels like a wall. All of you have experienced this, where you have done your meditations, you have read your books, you have gone to the workshops, you have studied, you have asked questions, and yet there seems to be a tiny little piece somewhere that, "I can't quite get ahold of it. I'm not quite sure how it all fits together. I ask my friends, and they give me a clue maybe, or maybe they just say, 'I don't know.'" And that's okay too.

Then you come to that place where you know that there has to be something more, there has to be an answer to whatever you're facing. As you go through human life, you're going to have question marks. You're going to have walls that you come up against. You're going to have times when you wonder, "How do I get over this wall? How do I get under this wall? How do I get around this wall?"

You come to a place where you feel like you've been held back, that you've been stopped, that you want to know more, that you do know more, but you want to know how to get ahold of it.

Well, again, we will come back. How do you find that space? By taking the deep breath. That is how it begins. That is the key that unlocks the door in the wall or will put for you the ladder to climb up over the wall. You start with a deep breath that says, "Okay, whatever is happening, I stop."

Because, as you have experienced, the mind loves to run on with all of the questions of, "How am I going to do this? Who am I going to speak to who is going to have the answer? Where do I go from here?" And it has to be logical, the mind says. Sometimes answers are not logical. Sometimes I have seen you; you get the answer, and you say, "Oh, no, it can't be that simple. No, I need a more outlined answer," one, two, three, all the way to the biggest number you can think of.

I need to have a very reasonable, rational, logical answer. And sometimes the answers are not logical. Sometimes they are only logical when you get to the other side of them and look back. Then you say, "Oh, now I see why that happened. Now I see why I met that person on Thursday at noontime, and she/he said..., and at that point I didn't know what they were talking about. But it was a piece of the puzzle."

So you allow yourself to keep breathing. I advise it's a good thing as long as you're activating a body to keep breathing. Then you abide in the place of peace, the place that says, "Okay, I don't have to put a whole lot of stress upon myself." In fact, when you do that, oftentimes that keeps the answer out there somewhere, and you're not being receptive to it.

But you come to the place of the wall and you feel, "I don't know what's on the other side of the wall. I just know that I can't go back. I have to go forward. There is this wall in front of me, and I need some answers." Have you ever said that? Sure, quite often. You have asked of your friends, you have asked of your teachers, you have gone to books, you have studied the books, and you have—if you're lucky—you have found an answer. You have found an Aha! "Oh, aha." All of you know that feeling too, like, "Okay, that falls into place. That makes sense."

So you go on a little bit farther, and sometimes another wall. And you say, "I thought I got past that." You turn and look around, and sure enough, you got past that wall, but there's another one. So what do you do? You take the deep breath and abide in peace, and you don't have to worry about the small parts, the small pieces. Do not sweat the small stuff. You take the deep breath and allow yourself to abide in peace until there is an illumination of an idea.

Even if it isn't the whole, you move forward with what you are getting, what answer you are getting. Or it may be a suggestion that you go and speak with someone. You're not really sure why. You feel really strange about it, but you go up to the person and say, "I need to talk with you for a minute. This is what's going on for me, and I have a feeling you have the answer for me.

And the other person probably will say, "I don't think I have the answer for you." But then you begin to talk, and as you do, you share, and something will lead like a bread crumb to another bread crumb to another, until you see that, "Okay, I'm really not stuck. I can go forward, even if it is only by inches—and sometimes that's how it feels; it's just an inch at a time.

Or other times it feels like it's leaps and bounds and it's like, "Thank goodness. I felt so held back for so long, and now I see what I can be doing. There is an exultation, a feeling of, "Wow!" and you go forward.

Now, in truth, you never go backward. You have it behind you, the experience of what you have done, and you bring it with you, because it is and has been a teaching that you have done for yourself, experience, and every incarnation will bring you experience; every incarnation, no matter what form you choose.

You may choose to be the honey bee. You don't have to be human in order to know life. You may be the mosquito that not everybody loves to have in their house. Or you may be the eagle that flies high. Or you may be one of the space brothers. How do you think you got here to live on holy Mother Earth? By thought, yes, but by thought of space travel. Ever think of that, ever wonder—I know you have, you've wondered how you got here. How did the first form get on holy Mother Earth? By thought and form, because form follows thought.

So have you ever been the space brother/sister? Think upon that. Sure. Why not? You are not limited. Anything you can think of, you have been, and much more; a lot of things you don't think of that you have experienced. This is why it is fun to do certain exercises where you go into the meditation or you go into what is called regressive hypnosis and go back to what seems to be a previous lifetime where you have been. Sometimes you experience what would seem to be very strange form, and yet anything you can think of, you can experience and you can be.

So when you sit here and seem to be contained in a body form, that is but one experience. If you can think—and I know that there many of you and brothers and sisters who like science fiction—the "Beam me up, Scotty," where did that idea come from? It came from you. It came from what you have done and experienced; otherwise, it would not be within your ken, within your knowing.

So when your programs come on and seem to be quite out there, you get very excited about them because, "Oh, wow, what is going to happen? How can they do this space travel? That expansive space...how could I be—all those light years that they're telling me it takes to travel from one galaxy to another." Well, if you figure that all travel is thought, that kind of cuts it down a bit.

Anything you can imagine, and much more, you have already experienced. So never put down or dismiss an idea that comes to you. It comes to tweak your memory as to how expansive you are. You are not contained within the body. You use it, as much as you think you can; you use it, but it is not all of you. The vast majority of you is not contained, cannot be contained. And you know that, because you have dreamt of running in the fields. You have dreamt of flying. You have dreamt other existences. Then you wake up and you say, "Oh, but it was just a dream."

I ask of you, where does the germ of a dream come from? From thought, and thought oftentimes is based on what you have already experienced doing and being. It is exciting, and you are "better and better" [he reads on someone's Tee shirt]. Good positive statement of truth.

When I spoke to my beloved friend and teacher that my topic this evening was going to be The Wall, she asked me, "Does that have anything to do with the political project that is being widely talked about?" And I said, "Well, of course." Everything is within the realm of thought, and that is where the wall stands; it's within the realm of thought. Will it be? For some of you, it will be a partial reality.

Because I will ask of you to do something fun. Put yourself forward in future time twenty-five years from now. Is there going to be a necessity for a wall such as what is being thought about now? No. I suggest to you that in twenty-five to fifty years of your timing, what you see as separate countries being Canada, United States, Mexico, some of Central America are all going to be joined together as one.

You are going to get tired of being against something. It's already germinating. So those of you who have been watching and following all of the talk—and that is what it is right now—just allow yourself to go some years forward and know that the communities that you have now are going to be changing; they are already changing.

It is very much as we have spoken many times about the seedling as it is germinating and coming up through the crust of the soil. It is difficult. It makes a mess of things. As that little seedling comes up, it pushes the dirt away. It changes everything. It takes a lot of energy to come up and push aside all that has been there in a certain form that looked like it was always going to be that way, and yet the seedling says, "But I must grow. I must flower. I must be."

That is where you are now. And those of you who remember lifetimes of being not only the seedling, the consciousness, the expanded consciousness; those of you who remember how it feels to be in a grouping such as this and at what you call a distance, how it feels to be friends, to be in true love and friendship with ones, you are saying, "Why can't we have that now?"

Because there is a belief in process, time, that says, "Well, there has to be a beginning. It has to grow. It has to germinate a little bit. It has to come up through the soil. It has to be a process.

But thought...that is the exciting thing. Thought can be really speedy, very fast, to go from an idea to a manifestation. If you look at the process that is happening from my vantage point, good heavens, it's very speedy. And it is for you too, because you can visualize it. You can feel it happening. You could say yes.

Then I have heard some of you saying, "But Yeshu'a, if I have a certain number of years to me, am I still going to be activating the body when this happens, because it seems like it's going to be a long time from now."

The answer to that is, "As you wish." If you want to recycle and come back, make a form again, or if you want to say, "Well, I've already visualized that, and I really like what I visualized, maybe I don't have to actually do it in and with form. Maybe I just know that it's going to happen."

You see, where you stand in any moment, there are more than you can count pathways from that point; potentials. And that which you can visualize, imagine, play with, all of it, in truth, has already happened. But it is fun to walk it, and that is why you do it. It is fun to experience it. It is fun to, even if the body doesn't want to do too much; you know, you give it a command and it says, "Ah, what are you talking about? I'm not going to get up and walk."

And you say, "Okay, body, you don't have to get up and walk. I can think it. I can see myself walking. And even if the physicality doesn't want to move, that's okay. You can't hold me back." And there you go.

You say, "Well, it's not exactly the form that I had in mind." But you see, you cannot be held back. You cannot be contained. Even though the body will speak to you and say, "Well, heck, you can't get out there and run a mile in two minutes," yes, you can, in your mind. Is it real? Yes, it's real.

You are coming to a point of beginning to catch hold of the potential of the spirit of you, of the potential of not being held back by anything physical, and that is cause for rejoicing. That is what you are moving into. Those of you—and this takes in everyone listening to these words, reading these words—if you can think it, you have already been it.

Wow! That opens a few doors. If you can think of being the greatest footballer—and you can, because you know the feeling; you know that feeling of being out there and the ball is coming toward you and you catch it. You know that feeling. You've already done it. And then you say, "Well, yes, Yeshu'a, but it's not quite the same as being out on the field and actually doing it with the body."

Yes, it is, if you will accept it as such, because you have already done it. You have already...how would you know the feeling if you hadn't already done it? Your medical people, your scientists right now are telling you that the body has memory. There is a knowing; not only from what you have done in this lifetime, but from other lifetimes as well.

Know you how to fly? Yes, you do. How does it feel to fly, to be up above and to have the perspective to be able to look down upon all of the small little critters that are running around on the surface of the Earth? You can imagine it. You've probably been up in the airplane and looked down. If not, you remember how it is from the spaceship.

You know how it is as you do the certain meditation and go to the grassy knoll, you go to the tree, you go to the cloud, you look down on the green meadow. You know how it looks; the river that is running through, the green meadow, the bird that sits in the tree. How do you know that? Because you have already been there, done that.

How does it feel to be sleek as a cat and to hop down off the windowsill and move with an ease and a grace; as a small cat or as a big lion? Know you that the small four-footed one—you call it small—thinks she's as big as the lion? Why not?

There is a knowing. And as I have asked already, how do you have that knowing? It is because you have already been there, done that. It is in truth a remembrance. And you have a wise teacher who has said to you that everything that you do here is done in remembrance; not in remembrance of me. I don't care. If you want to remember me, that's fine, but you don't have to do it in remembrance of someone who seemingly is above you, because I'm not. I am not above you. We are equals; always will be, always have been. We are from the one Mind—capital "M". I just got good press; that's all.

So when you come to that place where there seems to be this wall in front of you, "Where am I going to go? You know, I would like to change my daily routine. I'd like to actually be doing something where I could use more of my talents, more of my thinking, more of the mental ideas of moving out somewhere. I wouldn't even mind having a job I could sit at. It might feel good.

Put yourself forward a year; not even that long. Visualize. Because I will say to you [an individual], a year from now you are going to be doing something very different than what you are doing now. Because of all of the experience that you've had up to this point, you're going to use all of that.

It is true for all of you. You're going to be moving on, developing, having more and more fun doing it, because up to a certain point in a lifetime, you seem to be accumulating experiences, knowledge, ideas, techniques. You go to school and they teach you how the accepted form of writing is, the accepted form of the sounds of words, and you say, "Okay, you know, I'll go along with it. I will study, I will learn."

Then you get to a certain point and say, "I think I want to do something exciting. I want to take a book that has a lot of good ideas in it; I found this to be true for myself, the ideas in this book, but I want to share them. I want somebody to sit with me and get turned on with these ideas."

So you gather to yourself a certain group of people who say, "Yes, I wouldn't mind knowing something a little different. I'd really like to get turned on to something exciting. So you read the book, you discuss the ideas, and at some point, as they say, the penny drops, and it comes together, and you say, "Ah, oh, really? I can do that?" Yes, you can do that. Yes, you can do that, and more.

You are living at a very exciting time, because the consciousness is ready to know what is beyond the wall. You are at a place where you know that no wall can hold you back. You are the one who built the wall, so therefore, it has to obey you.

Now, I know that sometimes walls can feel really thick. There were many times, as is recorded in your holy writings, that I took myself to a garden and communed with the Father, as I have called it—the Father, because it was a patriarchal society, and the father was seen to be the provider. As I have shared with you at other times, if it had been a matriarchal society, it would have been the Mother.

So I communed. I said, “Look, there are certain people in this group, the expanded group, this religious group, who don’t really like what I’m saying. I know they don’t like me, and they wish I would just stop sharing, but I can’t.” You’ve done this as well. You’ve gotten ahold of an idea, and you’ve been so excited about the idea that you had to share it, and the other ones might not have been at the place where you were, and they really didn’t care. They really didn’t want to hear what you had to say. But you were so full that you had to allow it to spill up and over and share with them. They looked at you like, “Where did he come from? What is he talking about?”

But you planted seeds. And for yourself, you were allowing them to germinate and start to grow. That has been exciting and will continue to be exciting, because, as I have said, you stand now on the threshold of the changing consciousness. It started some time ago, some—as you reckon time—centuries ago, and time as you have constructed it seems to move slowly. But as I have said, when you look at it from my perspective, it’s been as a blink of the eye; very quick.

Two thousand years ago, was I talking about some of the same things? Yes. Did you catch the ideas then? Yes. Why are you back now? Give me an answer to that. Why, if two thousand years ago you caught a glimpse of what I was sharing with you, why are you back now?

Patrick: We had to play with it and ponder on it and use our own ideas about it, and what are all the different possibilities of it, and...

Explore all the possibilities of it, yes, which is what you are doing right now with exploring new hints, ideas that come to you, and you get excited about them. You wake up in the morning and think, “Hmm, I wonder what that was all about when he/she said that yesterday, and I was thinking about that,” and a new idea comes. Sometimes you get very excited about it and you want to share it with someone, and you do.

And that is how consciousness changes—in an instant. One idea comes, and it will not be silent until you play with it, until you say, “Okay, I am going up and over this wall with this idea that just came to me. I’m getting excited about it. I really want to see where it goes. I want to see what happens.”

That is where you are standing. You are right on the edge of something that’s going to turn you on. You have been a good and faithful servant with ideas, with consciousness, being willing to be there for people who needed you to be there. But behold this one, because in the next twelve months of his timing, he is going to be a changed person; not that he isn’t a very good person right now, because he is. But he is going to be happier.

This one right now is up against his wall. This one feels, "You know, what I'm doing is good. I can see people being happy. I can see that I'm happy." Everyone that you come in contact with during the day, you are helping them, and that is good. But you are not turned on, and you want to be, and you will be. It will not be long. There is within you a feeling that something good is coming. "I can feel it," you say to yourself. "I can feel it. I can't reach out and actually touch it. I want to, but I know that it's coming. I know that there's going to be a good change. I know."

And not only for you, but for that person that you have been inviting to walk the path with you. I give you a fortune cookie. Sounds like one of those fortune things, okay. And what I say to this one in this group here is true for all of you, because you all stand at that place of moving into a new relationship with Self—capital "S"—the relationship with Self where you get really vibrantly excited.

Hey, that sounds good: vibrantly excited. Okay, it's happening. You have the pieces, and you are inviting them to come, and they are coming in your own timing, and it will not be long, because...remember this evening. A year from now we will meet—we will meet in between as well; won't have to wait a whole year; but you will measure for yourself. You will say, "Wow! Look what has happened in this year."

You are going to have fun. You are going to be...yes, there's going to be a little bit of discomfort, but you've been there before. You are going to be growing new cells, because you have said yes to life. You are going to be moving with an ease and grace; same for you. Same for all of you as you feel that maybe you're getting a bit stiff in the joints and not quite as limber as you used to be.

You are changing all of that because you want to, because you know it can be. You are attracting to yourself the techniques, the technology, the inventions, the new way of thinking, the friends who are going to support you in ideas. A year from now you are going to be a different person, a good one, a very good one.

You have often been—I don't often do fortune telling, do I?—but you have been in many lifetimes the master who taught other ones. You oftentimes were the master who couldn't move; didn't have to. You had a very active mind, had looked at the stars, had seen the progression of the stars, and you knew that there was a progression of consciousness, I will call it; a progression of expansion of ideas. You shared this with whoever wanted to sit at your feet, and you had many who came and wanted to know, "What's the new idea today?"

Sometimes they would tease you. "What's the new idea?" Then you would say, "Well, this is what I've been thinking about," and they would say, "Hmm, you know, that's really exciting," and you gave them a gift that they took away with them to think about. And you changed their lives, the same as you're doing this lifetime. He does, doesn't he? Yes. I know. I watch you sometimes when you don't know I'm watching.

This is a very exciting time, because the wall, you are beginning to see, if of your making. And if it is of your making, who can change it? Do you want to call on me to change it for you? I have news for you. I can only do for you what I can do with you. That is how powerful you are.

Your religious teachers, your holy Fathers have taught you for a long time that you were lowly worms of the dust, that you didn't know how to go out and you didn't know how to come in, that you had to come to them for advice. Sometimes the advice kept you in a container, kept you from thinking that you could be anything beyond what you were; not understanding how much you are and how far you could go.

But that is changing. The books that are coming to you, the openings you are making for new information, new ideas, new teachings of ones who have been there and broken through the old thinking; you are doing that as well. You have questions. You want to know. "I have certain years that I've brought to myself. I have a certain form. Where am I going to go? What am I going to do?"

Well, I can't tell you, but I know you have ideas. Act on them. Long enough have you stood back and said, "Well, I need a little bit more instruction." But that is the mind. The spirit of you says, "Go for it." The spirit of you says, "Hey, what are we waiting for?" Same thing, "What are we waiting for?" It is happening.

Have I ever said to you that I come as your cheerleader? I do. I asked of the Father/Mother. I said, "Okay, well, now that I've done what they call demonstration and I have ascended unto heaven—which was with me the whole time anyway—what do I do now?" And the answer was, "Live. Have ideas; go forward with them."

Never are you too much of a grey beard that you cannot go forward. Never are you held back by body, by physicality; never; master that you are; beginning to dictate the teachings that you know. On the morrow, first thing; first thing on the morrow—what time do you wake up? (Usually about five or six) Good. At five minutes after six, start dictating whatever comes to mind: how happy you are, how you are turned on by awaking one more time, what a blessing it is to open the eyes one more time. Write or speak that which comes to you. Master that you are, you have much to share, and it is time.

Now, truth be told, he's already been thinking. He's already been sharing, right? Yes. Keep on, because you have much to share that ones are hungering and thirsting to know. They want just a little push. They think they have come up against the wall and that the wall is bigger than they are. You can call it something like the end of the wall, how to...well, you'll think of it; the end of the wall. Get out your ladders; climb over the wall. Get out your shovel; climb under the wall. Get out the walking stick; walk around the wall. Get the balloon and go over; any way you want to do it.

And know that truly you never do anything alone. Always there is help. Always I am here to help. The masters, the teachers, the ones you have known in other lifetimes, the ones who have written the books in this lifetime; you are teachers to each other. Share what you know. Share what you are questioning, because sometimes answers come out of the questions.

Be excited about life. Go for it, as they say. Be excited. What else are you going to do with the days that are "left" to you, and there are many. Be excited. Know that there is no wall that is too high, too thick, too long. Take the deep breath and say, "I am going," and with that, a miracle happens. The wall disappears. So be it.
