Volume 7, Chapter 22

“I choose to know that everything works for good and it does. Nothing is ever lost. Everything you have ever experienced in any lifetime is within your soul. Your universal purpose is to express the creative Energy. It is completely open to whatever you want it to be.”
Jeshua

Introduction

The relevance of this chapter seems to span thousands of years, from the times of struggle and drama in Jeshua’s time to our own. And he gives us the same advice that he gave to his disciples “You acknowledge the appearance. Then you look beyond what seemingly is unhealed or unholy and you see the person (or situation) in holiness. This is a good time for finding your center, for finding your peaceful place amidst all of the changes that are happening. Call everything good.”

Jeshua wants us to “be aware” and “to choose to see peace” so that we may know our strength and power to handle whatever drama we are in. We also have the power to transform it by our reactions. He assures us again, that we are “greatly loved, guided and always taken care of”. When we truly understand this higher reality, we can claim our mastership and even by joyful about the challenges that we overcome.

Then we are ready for endings of some issues and the beginnings of new choices, sometimes based in the physical and other times in the emotional levels. “The only hell is the hell that you make for yourself in the present moment of fearing something.” We can choose to stop creating agony and create celebration and joy and “Rejoice in every ending, because it is a beginning.”

The power principles of “Endings and Beginnings”:

- It is important to acknowledge humanly created circumstances, but not to get mired in them. Instead, our challenge is to see the perfection and holiness of their purpose and creativity.
- Everything that is presented to us has a divine purpose “not to upset you”, but for us to realize our strength, be in joy and choose to experience God’s love.
- When we release our knapsacks of fear, they will dissolve into nothingness.
- We have the freedom to choose to incarnate in whatever forms we want to create, “know that truly you are going to live your purpose. You are the Light.”
- We are all greatly loved and always taken care of!

Discussion Questions

- What passage in this chapter touches your heart? Your mind? Your imagination? Changes in how you understand yourself and your life?
- Jeshua makes a bold statement in this chapter “A lot of the brothers and sisters two thousand year ago thought that what I spoke of was far out, blasphemy. It was not what was taught in the Temple. How could I speak intimately of the Father’s love? How could I speak that everyone was loved? I spoke ideas that were rather radical at that time and are still radical if ones actually understand what I was saying.” What ideas have you studied in this and other Jeshua books that are new or “radical” to you? Have you contemplated them in your mind and heart? Is there one idea in particular that has made a major impact on your life, your relationships with yourself or others or even the direction of your life? Discuss with your partner.
- An almost universal fear of humankind is the fear of death of the body, especially dying alone. But Jeshua reassures us that “In the darkest moments we are with you. As you breathe, as you trust, you call out to your angels, guides, teachers – and we are always around you – we will be with you. We cannot be anywhere else, truly, since there is no separation and you are the Light, same as we are. When you de cease the body, you go to your own Light. The Light that you go to is so brilliant that you will think that someone must have turned on a billion light bulbs. And all of the ones you have ever loved are there. If they have laid down the body, they are there to welcome you and there is great joy and rejoicing and great love. It is Home.” (age 238) Does this description ease your fear of death, if you have carried that fear? Does it help you live in more freedom and with more purpose, knowing “how loved you are and how you are surrounded by Love.” Discuss with your partner.

Assignments

- Jeshua gives us the assignment (page 236) regarding the knapsacks or backpacks full of fears that we have been carrying around. “Okay, let’s get the knapsack out here and look at what’s in it.” Contemplate what is in your invisible but perhaps heavy backpack. What issues are you dealing with that no longer serve you? What fears are you ready to say “Enough already. I’m going to look at it.” If it is difficult for you to see your own issues, ask someone who knows you well to help you identify what may not be obvious to you. Then do a releasing meditation and dissolve the issue “into the nothingness that it has always been. Every ending of a fear is a beginning of new life, new awareness. Rejoice in every ending, because it is a beginning.” Say good-bye to it and feel the backpack lighten significantly. Breathe peace. Journal about it or speak to a trusted friend about this process.

- Jeshua encourage us to live our lives fully. “Every day, every moment of every day is a celebration of life if you will see it thus. Yes, I know that there are messages of the world, messages of the mind that sometimes question, but at the heart of everything is the Truth that you are always taken care of and that you are always in Love. It cannot be otherwise.” (page 240) Reflect on your life and be honest with yourself about how you see it and how much of your day you spend in gratitude and celebration. Can you up the percentage of time that you live in Love? Share your love of life with someone – reach out to them, call them or write a note letting them know how much you love them. When you share your love it has to come back to you. Journal about their reaction and your own joy.
